Stevens high court choice

by RICHARD E. LERNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Friday nominated U.S. Appeals Judge John Paul Stevens of Chicago to succeed retired Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, calling Stevens the "best qualified" of all the men and women boosted for the job.

Ford offered no clues as to whether the 55-year-old Stevens — unknown to most of the nation — might be expected to strengthen the conservative or the dwindling liberal wing of the court, nor any indication what his judicial views or political allegiance might be.

But professional lawyers who know the gray-haired, soft-spoken Stevens described him, in the words of one, as "a man you can't really type as a liberal or a conservative, a very pragmatic thinker" — and they unanimously expressed professional enthusiasm at the choice.

IN A SURPRISE action scheduled only hours in advance, Ford appeared before White House reporters on the eve of his departure for China and announced he had concluded a two-week search for "the person I believe to be best qualified to serve as an associate justice of the Supreme Court."

It was Stevens, a member of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago since 1970 and a brilliant lawyer who had the enthusiastic support of both the American Bar Assn. and Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi.

Ford's announcement ended speculation he might nominate the first woman Supreme Court Justice as his wife and many feminists urged him to do — or choose some well known, but possibly controversial, candidate such as Solicitor Gen. Robert Bork.

"Judge Stevens is held in the highest esteem by his colleagues in the legal profession and the judiciary and has had an outstanding career in the practice and teaching of law as well as on the federal bench," Ford said in his nationally broadcast announcement.

"I am confident that he will bring both professional and personal qualities of the highest order to the Supreme Court."

IN CHICAGO, Stevens told reporters he would "do everything in my power to render the best possible judicial service of which I am capable. . .

"If the Senate finds my qualifications acceptable I will begin the new assignment as expeditiously as possible and will do my utmost to discharge the responsibilities of the new office in a manner consistent with the finest traditions of a great institution."

Douglas, the man he would succeed, declined comment on the nomination.

Ford, who had submitted a list of at least 15 potential nominees to the ABA for its recommendations, said he had "conducted a thorough search and considered an extensive list of distinguished men and women to fill" the vacancy left by Douglas — a vacancy that reduced the liberal wing of Chief Justice Warren Burger's court to two members: Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall.

JUAN ALDAPE is led into Niles court Friday after his arrest in the shooting death of an ex-girlfriend Pamela Keeley, 17, 1606 Algonquin Rd., Mount Prospect. Aldape, 19, of Mount Prospect is being held on charges of murder, aggravated kidnapping and burglary.

Mt. Prospect girl murdered

by JOHN MAES

A Mount Prospect man has been charged with the kidnaping and murder of his 17 year old ex-girlfriend while her parents slept.

The body of Pamela Keeley, 1606 Algonquin Rd., clad only in underpants and a white T-shirt, was dumped along a roadside at Belmont Avenue and Noyes Street near Arlington Heights early Friday. She was shot five times in the head and chest.

Her father Jack Keeley said, "My wife and I were sound asleep through the whole thing." They were notified of the killing by police.

IN CUSTODY IS Juan Aldape, 19, of 549 Dempster St., an employe at Universal Oil Products Co., Des Plaines. He has been charged with murder, aggravated kidnaping and burglary, said Lt. Frank Braun of the Sheriff's Police.

The girl was a senior at Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, where the two had met, and had planned to become a stewardess with United Airlines following graduation, her father said. "She said it was something she'd like to do," he said.

Braun said Aldape allegedly shot the girl outside a gas station about a block away from where the body was found. Police were uncertain of the time of the shooting.

The girl was taken to Northwest Community Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

Pam Keeley

Police from Arlington Heights arrived on the scene about 6:45 a.m. after receiving two calls, one from a motorist who saw the body and reported it as an injury accident.

BRAUN SAID AFTER the shooting, Aldape reported the incident to Northwest Central Dispatch Center, a police radio communications system covering Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village and Buffalo Grove departments.

Braun said Aldape was later arrested at his apartment without struggle and the alleged murder weapon, a 22-cal. pistol, was confiscated.

Aldape and the girl had been dating and broke up a few weeks ago, Braun said.

Police say Aldape broke into the apartment by smashing the glass in a kitchen door. The elder Keeley said the family returned from a Thanksgiving get-together about 2:30 a.m.

The parents notified Mount Prospect police about 8:30 a.m. after they woke up and discovered the break-in and their daughter missing, Braun said.

Aldape was arraigned Friday afternoon before Associate Judge Albert H. LaPlante in the Niles branch of circuit Court. The suspect was ordered taken to County jail without bound pending a Dec. 2 court date in Niles.

Keeley also said his daughter had begun working part time at Sambo's Restaurant, Mount Prospect, about a week ago.

Christians, Jews begin holiday seasons

Saturday

Advent: prelude to Christmas

by KAREN BLECHA

Repent and rejoice. These are the two words that symbolize Advent, the church season that begins Sunday.

At Roman Catholic and Protestant churches throughout the area, families will light the first candle on the Advent wreath to welcome the season that prepares for Christmas and the coming of Christ.

Advent is a season that has changed at many churches over the years. Years ago it was a season of penance; today it is also a season for rejoicing.

"In past history the color purple used during Advent was a sign of penance," said the Rev. James Plosi, of St. Hubert's Catholic Church in Hoffman Estates.

"TODAY IT is more of a joyful celebration — a waiting for the coming of Christ," he said.

The season of Advent is second only to Easter in importance in most churches. The term "advent" is of secular origin, referring to the official reception of royalty.

In the Roman Catholic Church, Advent is a time of preparation for Christmas and a season of looking forward to Christ's second coming at the end of time. The first part of the season focuses on the glorious return of the Lord while the second part accents the Lord's birth.

The symbols of the season are the Advent wreath, which symbolizes the unending God, and the Jesse tree. The Advent wreath has four candles, each one representing one of the four Sundays before Christmas. Each Sunday one of the candles is lit.

At the Church of the Incarnation United Methodist, Arlington Heights, the candles have added significance, said the Rev. Larry Hillkemann. The candles symbolize the Wise Men, Shepherds, Mary and Joseph who obeyed the Lord and the birth of Christ.

"WE ALSO have a Jesse tree which is a reminder of the Old Testament and that God said Jesus would be coming," Hillkemann said. At Church of the In-

Hanukkah: Festival of Lights

by JILL BETTNER

The Hanukkah candles the Milton Jacobs family will light this weekend in their Hoffman Estates home symbolize a personal commitment to preserving the special meaning of the beautiful eight-day Festival of Lights.

They believe without this kind of dedication, the significance of Hanukkah could be lost and the customs subtly "Christianized" in the Northwest suburbs.

Today, Jews are outnumbered nearly four-to-one in the Northwest suburbs, creating some problems for families like the Jacobs who want their two young daughters, Bonni, 7, and Cheryl, 5, to understand and appreciate the uniqueness of their own religion and heritage.

HANUKKAH IS PROBABLY the toughest time to protect Jewish individuality, she said, especially for children. For a while, Bonni and Cheryl attended public schools. Concerned that the girls might feel left out of things with the general preoccupation with Christmas, Mrs. Jacobs would request time to speak to their classes about Hanukkah.

Her husband agreed, saying, "Christmas puts a lot of pressure on Jewish children. Hanukkah is important, but it isn't a holiday that should be equated to Christmas in importance. But because the two happen about the same time, it is."

Bonni and Cheryl now attend Woodfield Jewish Day School, Hoffman Estates, where children begin learning Hebrew and Jewish history in kindergarten.

Bonni knows all about Hanukkah, which, she explained, "reminds us of all the things that happened in the story of the Maccabees."

THE MACCABEES were a group of guerrillas who literally saved the Jewish religion from being wiped out by the Syrians in 165 B.C. Syrian King Antiochus decreed that year that the only temple of worship for Jews in Palestine was to be destroyed. The temple was taken over, idols placed inside and a pig sacrificed on the altar, desecrating the House of God.

Refusing to accept religious genocide, the Mac-

Slatemakers ponder choices

5 Dems bid for state's attorney

by WANDALYN RICE and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Five Democrats, including one who reportedly received a personal call from Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, asked Friday for regular Democratic party endorsement for county state's attorney.

The five included Illinois Appellate Court Judge Edward J. Egan who was reported to have been asked by Daley to appear before the party slatemakers. The other candidates were Alex Seith, Wheaton, chairman of the County Zoning Board; County Board member John Stroger Jr.; State Rep. Gerald Shea, D-Berwyn; and Deputy Police Supt. Mitchell Ware.

The endorsement of a candidate in the state's attorney's race is expected early next week. The Democratic Party Central Committee has slatemaking meetings scheduled Monday and Tuesday at the LaSalle Hotel, Chicago.

DALEY IS EXPECTED to take special care in selecting the state's attorney's candidate this year to ensure that the office will be recaptured from Republican Bernard Carey, who was elected in 1972 after a Democratic primary fight for the nomination.

The three-way Democratic primary was between then-incumbent Edward Hanrahan; Raymond Berg, who had Daley's backing; and independent Democrat Donald Page Moore. Hanrahan had been dumped by the regular party organization, but won the primary, only to lose in the general election to Carey.

Egan, who comes from a third-generation Chicago police family, served as assistant state's attorney from 1961 until he was named to the county Circuit Court in 1964. He was named to the Appellate Court in 1973.

Seith, an attorney for a Chicago law firm, has served as deputy chairman for the foreign affairs task force of the Democratic National Committee and a member of the national party committee charged with ensuring increased minority participation in party conventions.

SEITH SAID FRIDAY he was urged to seek slating "by a number of people who have to do with the slating process." He said, "It intrigued me as a challenge. I think there are some things I could do with that office that should be done."

Shea is majority leader of the Illinois House and is acknowledged as Daley's legislative leader. He said Friday he sought slating "because I believe I'm a qualified candidate."

Stroger was elected to the county board in 1970. Ware, a former director of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation, has come under fire for his police activities by State's Atty. Carey.

Also appearing before the slatemakers Friday were 14 candidates for three six-year terms on the Metropolitan Sanitary District board, County Recorder Sidney R. Olson and Circuit Court Clerk Morgan Finley. Both Olson and Finley were unopposed in their requests for reslating.

THE MSD CANDIDATES include Diane Hunter of Skokie, the woman who led the Democratic ticket in the suburbs last year as an unsuccessful candidate for county board, and Aurelia Pucinski, daughter of Chicago Alderman and former Congressman Roman Pucinski.

Incumbent MSD candidates include Valentine Janicke, seeking a third term, and James C. Kirie and John Rogers, both seeking second terms.

Other candidates are Lawrence F. Kast, Dolton; Patricia Seibert, Evanston; Maria Beron, Chicago; Nelly Jones, Chicago; Richard J. Troy, Chicago; Louise Rome, River Forest; Marian Humes, Chicago; Ms. Bobby Moss, Chicago; and Patrick O'Block, Hazelcrest.

Growth rate of U.S. economy slowing down

by ANDREW NIBLEY

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The index of leading business indicators — a barometer of future trends in the economy — fell 0.5 per cent in October, the Commerce Dept. reported Friday.

It was the second consecutive monthly decline. But government economists said last month's slight dip, following a 0.1 per cent drop in September, does not necessarily mean worsening economic conditions or a return to recession.

Instead, the experts said it probably indicates there will be a slowing in the growth rate of the economy in the fourth quarter — to somewhere around 6 or 7 per cent — after the resounding 13.2 per cent jump in the real Gross National Product in the third quarter.

The index had been rising rapidly since March, but began to slow in August when it rose only 0.6 per cent, the report said.

Assistant Commerce Sec. James L. Pate said the October figures suggest there will be "some slowing in the pace of over-all economic activity in the fourth quarter." But he said "continued strong growth throughout 1976 is anticipated."

A Treasury official called the meaning of the new figures "obscure," and said generally a three-or four-month trend is needed to fully determine any new trend in the economy.

He said for the last three months combined, the index has shown no change, which would indicate a general leveling off but "not necessarily a downward turn."

The Commerce Dept. said 4 of the 11 indicators sued in the index declined in October, 5 rose and 2 were unchanged.

A drop in total liquid assets, which measure the nation's wealth in terms of cash, checking accounts and other readily available commercial paper, contributed most to the over-all decline in the index, the department said.

Drops also were registered in net business formation, the nation's money supply and building permits.

Moving up were vendor performance, the wholesale price of crude materials, new orders for consumer goods, orders for plant and equipment, and stock prices. The average work week and the worker layoff rate were unchanged.

After the two monthly declines, the department said the composite index now stands at 102.0 of the 1967 base of 100. This is up 12.1 per cent from the February low of 91.0.

ST. LOUIS YOUNGSTERS spent their day after Thanksgiving riding an old automobile hood down a hill. The fun may be short-lived. Temperatures are expected to be in the 50s today. Meanwhile, heavy snows were reported in the East and West.

Northern Utah gets 24 inches

Heavy snows batter East, West

by United Press International

Heavy snows belted mountainous sections of the West Friday, slowing holiday weekend travelers and imperiling hunters in the high country. A storm that swirled across the midlands on Thanksgiving eve directed its last blows at northern New England.

Snow was falling over most of the Rocky Mountains and the intermountain plateau area. Some mountainous areas received as much as 24 inches of fresh snow, and the snow came down at more than an inch-an-hour clip at Flagstaff, Ariz.

The storm hampered the search for two Grand Junction, Colo., police officers missing on a coyote hunting trip on lofty Grand Mesa. Ten ground vehicles were thrown into the search in 20 inches of new snow but the bad weather grounded two Civil Air Patrol search planes.

Icy highways were the undoing of three escapers from the county jail at Hot Sulpher Springs, Colo. They were recaptured when the stolen car in which they were fleeing skidded off the highway near Silverthorne, Colo.

The heaviest reported snowfall was 24 inches in the mountains of northern Utah and sections of Colorado. Up to 15 inches hit mountainous regions of northern New Mexico. Flagstaff, in northern Arizona, received seven inches in six hours early Friday and it was still snowing. There was 16 inches on the ground by midmorning.

Snow in Nevada caused icy conditions which closed Reno's airport early Friday and hampered auto travel.

Cold weather clamped on the northern Rockies. The nation's low early Friday was 7 below zero at Lewistown, Idaho.

New England's first major winter storm kept early season skiers happy in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, and at least a dozen ski areas —assisted by snow making equipment — were able to operate on a limited basis.

Editor's kidnaper to get new trial

A three-judge federal court Friday in New Orleans overturned the conviction of a man who admitted kidnaping former Atlanta Constitution editor Reg Murphy, ruling that pretrial publicity and prejudicial arguments prevented a fair trial. The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals ordered a new trial for William A H. Williams, convicted Aug. 4, 1974, of extorting $700,000 ransom for Murphy, held captive 49 hours in February, 1974. Williams was sentenced to 40 years in prison. "The intense pretrial publicity and the prejudicial closing argument by the government, operating together, deprived defendant of a fair trial," the ruling said.

New York lottery director fired

Gov. Hugh Carey of New York Friday fired the $29,900-a-year director of the discredited New York State Lottery Commission and ordered its 317 other employes laid off or transferred to other departments. At the same time Carey released a report which found "needless opportunities for fraud" in the operation of the state lottery, lax security and "a variety of problems of a very serious nature." The governor suspended the $50-million-a-year lottery Oct. 22 after duplicate tickets were issued for a drawing.

Iceland threatens to withdraw from NATO

Icelandic Foreign Minister Einar Agustsson Friday said his country may withdraw from NATO if Britain does not recall its trawlers from Iceland's newly-proclaimed 200-mile fishing limits. "We can take this matter of the invasion up in NATO with the possible results that we may leave the alliance," Agustsson said. If Iceland should leave NATO it would be a blow for the Western powers because the NATO surveillance base at Keflavik would have to be abandoned. Currently, more than 1,000 American sailors are stationed at Keflavik to monitor Soviet air and sea activity.

Stocks make small gain

Although federal aid to help New York City avoid default was welcome news, many investors stayed home Friday following Thanksgiving as prices registered a small gain in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Aided by some late blue-chip buying, the Dow Jones industrial average, ahead more than four points in the first half hour of trading and off more than a point later, gained 2.12 points to 860.67. With Friday's rise, the Dow average gained 19.91 points for the week and finished the month of November with a 24.63-point advance.

Stevens — a conservative

He's precise and a stickler for precedent

by JAMES A. KIDNEY
A news analysis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A sampling of opinions by Judge John Paul Stevens reveals that President Ford's choice for the Supreme Court fits his desire for a legal conservative who may join other recently appointed justices in reversing the liberal legal tide dating back to Earl Warren.

The White House released a list of opinions culled from nearly 200 which the American Bar Assn. examined in ruling that Stevens is "highly qualified" to succeed William O. Douglas, one of the most liberal justices in history.

Those opinions show Stevens is unsympathetic to rights of the accused, is inclined to uphold government wiretaps, hesitates to strike down legislative redistricting which might be discriminatory and wants to give states more leeway in applying the law under the federal Constitution.

Although the list of 11 opinions cannot be called conclusive, the White House called the list "representative opinions of Judge John Paul Stevens." They fit the mold of a conservative legal scholar, who is detailed in his writing and feels strongly bound by precedent.

Based on the opinions, Stevens will be considered a moderate conservative on the bench along the lines of Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who was appointed by President Richard M. Nixon along with three other conservative justices.

If confirmed, it appears unlikely Stevens will be a strong ally of the court's declining liberal membership — Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan Jr.

Stevens' opinions are lengthy and covered with footnotes, indicating he is precise and spends much time researching his position. In one 15-page opinion upholding an Illinois legislature vote against the Equal Rights Amendment, Stevens had 46 footnotes, many of them lengthy.

In the Illinois case, Stevens said the founding fathers left it up to the states how to ratify proposed constitutional amendments. He said the state could require a three-fifths vote, rather than a majority. ERA was approved by a majority of the legislature in Illinois at the time, but failed to win three-fifths approval.

Stevens paid great attention to the debates on the Constitution nearly 200 years ago and concluded they reached "the basic understanding that state legislatures should have the power and the discretion to determine for themselves how they should discharge the responsibilities committed to them by the federal government."

The Supreme Court in the last two years has extended the rights of children, but based on another opinion it seemed unlikely to get Stevens' support. He dissented when the majority of the appeals court blocked enforcement of a male hair length dress code in an Indiana school.

"To the extent that parents and teachers stand together, a child has no enforceable constitutional right to do his own thing," Stevens said. "It is only when the parent supports a child's attempt to accelerate a change in customs that a meaningful conflict arises . . .

"Since the child has no enforceable rights to remain unshorn or unwashed without parental consent, I find nothing offensive in a dress code which merely requires conformity unless excused by a child's parents."

In one of the most significant opinions on the list, Stevens was willing to draw a test of legislative reapportionment, making it very difficult for minorities to claim they were discriminated against.

Again in dissent, Stevens said a 1970 Chicago city council redistricting was proper because although it maintained many historic aldermanic boundaries, it was nevertheless equally divided by population.

He said mere presence of some discrimination as not sufficient to strike down a redistricting plan because the state must be given wide leeway to redistrict as it sees fit.

"If the constitutional standard is so strict that any purpose to disadvantage a bloc of voters is enough to warrant the 'invidious discrimination' label, the facts of political life will deny legislatures the right to perform the districting function," Stevens said.

On criminal law, Stevens upheld the use of a wiretap for 30 days under a court order. He said it was not overly broad under the Fourth Amendment prohibition against search and seizure.

John P. Stevens

Judge Stevens —a look at his background

Here is a brief biography of Judge John Paul Stevens:

He is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Chicago and topped the 1947 graduating class of Northwestern University law school.

He served as a law clerk for Supreme Court Justice Wiley Rutledge in 1947-48, and an associate counsel of the House Judiciary subcommittee on monopoly power in 1951.

Between 1952 and 1970 Stevens was a partner in the Chicago law firm of Rothschild, Hart, Stevens and Barry.

Stevens taught antitrust law at Northwestern law school in 1953 and at Chicago law school in 1954-55. Between 1953 and 1965 he was also a member of attorney general's national commission to study antitrust laws.

He served in the U.S. Navy Reserve during World War II and won the Bronze Star for valor.

In 1969, he was general counsel for a special Illinois Supreme Court Commission investigating misconduct charges against two state supreme court justices, Roy J. Solfisburg Jr. and Ray I. Klingbiel.

Both justices eventually resigned. They admitted holding stock in a Chicago bank in which Theodore J. Isaacs, then state revenue director and since imprisoned, was a director.

President Richard M. Nixon appointed him a U.S. Circuit Court judge in 1970.

Stevens is married to the former Elizabeth Jane Sheeren. They have four children.

The Stevens live in suburban Burr Ridge with their two youngest daughters, Elizabeth, 14, and Susan, 12.

Their oldest son, John, 26, lives in Phoenix, Ariz., with his wife and is currently unemployed. Their oldest daughter, Kathryn, 24, lives in Clarendon Hills, Ill., with her husband and two children.

No fooling! Horses ordered to wear diapers

• Operators of horse-drawn carriages in historic Charleston, S.C. think a new city ordinance requiring horses to wear diapers is disgraceful and insulting to the horses. Beginning Monday, the owners will have to outfit their horses with diaper bags to catch the droppings, or face misdemeanor charges.

• Pianist Liberace reported to police Friday that burglars had broken into a Bel Air home where he was staying and stole jewelry valued at $33,000.

People

• Rabbi Meir Kahane, a jailed Jewish Defense League leader who has threatened a hunger strike if he is not served kosher food in his Allenwood, Pa., jail, will get the same religious preferences as other inmates, an official of the federal prison farm said.

• Gordon H. Scherer resigned Friday as America's executive board member of the U.N.'s Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) to protest the "overwhelming domination of the United Nations by the Communist-Arab and Third World bloc."

'Good choice for top court'

President Ford's choice of Judge John Paul Stevens for the U.S. Supreme Court drew quick praise in legal circles.

Warren Christopher, chairman of the ABA committee that screened the candidates, said Stevens earned the ABA's "highest evaluation" for professional competence, judicial temperament and integrity.

U.S. Atty. Gen. William Levi called Ford's choice "a commitment to excellence."

Former U.S. attorney James Thompson said Stevens could not be typed as conservative or liberal and, asked whether the judge were a Democrat or Republican, said: "Gosh, I don't know!"

Philip Kurland, a University of Chicago authority on constitutional law, said of the nomination, "How do you register enthusiasm. He's a first-rate lawyer, a first-rate judge and a first-rate person. More than that you can't ask for.

"He's likely to fall in with Potter Stewart and Byron White and Lewis Powell — in the center of the court. Not right nor left, I expect."

"I've known him for about 30 years. He's shy, modest, soft-spoken, dedicated, very hard working — a first-rate lawyer.

"I don't think he (Ford) could have done better. He would have done as well had he appointed U.S. Atty. Edward Levi. But he couldn't have done better."

U.S. Atty. Samuel Skinner of the Northern Illinois District, said:

"He will be just a fantastic addition to the court."

He said Stevens takes a deliberate approach and is "very cautious about expanding federal law." But he will do so when necessary, Skinner said.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr: "I think he defies an easy categorization. I couldn't imagine a better appointment. He's an unusual judge, just one of the great ones."

cabees formed a small underground army and, led by a man called Judah, won back the temple.

The military victory of the band was the first of two miracles or "nesses" commemorated by the observance of Hanukkah.

The other miracle explains why the holiday is called the Festival of Lights.

When the Maccabees retook the temple, they discovered that the eternal light, which reminds worshippers that God is ever present, had burned out. Only a small cruet of oil, enough to keep the lamp burning just one day, could be found. Miraculously, the oil lasted eight days until more could be made, and Judah proclaimed a memorial festival.

EVOLVING AS a family holiday, Hanukkah is a time for gift giving and sharing with the poor.

Each evening, contemporary menorahs are lit in the home. The Shamus candle lights on consecutive nights one of eight other tapers of the menorah. Friday, the Shamus and first taper was lit; tonight, another shall glow, Sunday another, then another, until all nine candles shine on the final night.

Hanukkah is a happy time, a special holiday with customs like these passed down from generation to generation for more than 2,000 years. To say that it is "Jewish Christmas," as some who don't know better do, is wrong.

As Cheryl told one of her Catholic girlfriends last year after seeing her family's Christmas tree, "That's very nice. Christmas is pretty and I'm very happy for you, but we have a very nice holiday too."

carnation the tree is a branch on which children place seven symbols representing church history. The symbols include Adam and Eve, Noah and the Flood, Abraham, Isaac and the Ram, Jacob, the robe that Joseph wore, Moses and the law and David.

Rev. Hilkemann said some churches do not use Christmas hymns during the season of Advent, saving them for the Christmas celebration while others use them throughout Advent as part of the rejoicing.

Advent is also the beginning of the church year, said the Rev. David Stuckmeyer of Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

"I think there is more of an emphasis throughout the whole Christian church on the celebration aspect of forgiveness than on the penitential aspect of personal worthiness," he said. "Advent is a time for rejoicing in God's forgiveness."

THEY CAME BY THE thousands to shop the post-Thanksgiving bargains Friday at shopping centers throughout the area. Weary shoppers take a break at Woodfield Shopping Center, a scene that was repeated in most stores, as record-breaking crowds defied inflation to buy, buy buy.

Merchants delighted: 'recession over'

Christmas shoppers pack Northwest stores

A Herald staff report

Record crowds of shoppers streamed into Northwest suburban stores Friday to begin their holiday shopping, kicking off what is expected to be the highest-volume sales season ever.

At Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg, where crows of almost 125,000 packed the mall the day after Thanksgiving last year, officials estimated 20 per cent more shoppers this year.

Merchants throughout the area believe the recession has ended, shoppers are more confident about money and Christmas sales will break all previous records.

AT WOODFIELD, lockers for coats and packages were full by 10 a.m., parking spaces were at a premium by 11, and by noon, lines streamed outside restaurants and rest rooms.

The red and purple steps in the center of the mall were covered with shoppers seeking a rest from heavy shopping bags and shoulder-to-shoulder traffic.

Still, not many shoppers seemed to mind the crowds.

"I like to go shopping when it's like this," one teenager was overheard saying to her friend. "Salespeople don't bug you when it's this crowded."

David Silger, merchandising manager at Sears at Woodfield, said the day after Thanksgiving is so busy because there are several things happening simultaneously that do not usually occur at the same time.

BESIDES THE traditional desire to start Christmas shopping after Thanksgiving, Silger said, many firms are closed, enabling more people to go shopping; with husbands home, more wives could leave their children home and shop in peace; days when schools are closed are busy because high school students come to the malls and mothers bring young children in for clothes; and banks paid out Christmas Club money last week.

"In departments where people traditionally do their Christmas shopping, like jewelry and cosmetics, we may have as many as 50 per cent additional salespeople," Silger said.

"We're geared for this type of traffic all the time because we pack this store every Saturday and Sunday," he said. "This is just more continuous. It starts heavy and it ends heavy."

Department stores have increased their security staffs in preparation for the expected heavy Christmas crowd and its accompanying shoplifters, and the Schaumburg Police Dept. will join with the regular Woodfield security police patroling both inside and outside the mall.

SALES EXPECTATIONS in general are high. Merchants said business was not too bad last year during the recession, so they are expecting very good sales this year.

Mike Silverman, president of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, said, "All merchants who are trying to get business should succeed. If you're aggressive and have a good product or service, there are enough people in this area that there's no reason for business to be bad."

Phyllis Peszek of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Assn., said merchants there are expecting a good season. Helen DeWitt, public relations director for the Hawthorn Shopping Center in Libertyville, said she expects sales to be up over last year since more than 100 stores in the 3-year-old mall are now open.

Carol Pisasras, a saleswoman at Teddy's a women's fashions store, said the warm November weather cut into expected sales.

"Who needs winter clothing when it's 70 degrees outside," she said. "Now that there is some snow on the ground, people are more in the Christmas-buying spirit."

CHUCK SACCARO, owner of the Craft Shop at Randhurst, said sales last month were "incredible."

"Most of the people who shop here make their own Christmas gifts," he explained. "They buy what they need in November to give them time to make things."

Silger said many items in Sears are selling so fast that it is difficult to fill orders.

"There is a lot more investment in family entertainment gifts," Silger said "Our hottest item is "Pong," a $99 ping pong game which attaches to a TV set. We can't get enough of them. A type of pinball machine called Pachinko is selling fast at $50. People seem to realize they should be spending more time with their families. Instead of watching TV all night, they're attaching a Pong machine to the set and playing Pong."

Silger said other fast-selling items are mood rings, blow dryers, electronic watches for men and women, curling irons, leisure suits and anything made out of prewashed denim.

"PEOPLE ARE BUYING higher-quality items with longer lasting features— top of the line appliances, better quality clothing," he said. "Inflation is high, the dollar is hard to earn, and people are tired of getting little use out of something they paid good money for."

On what is traditionally described by merchants as the busiest day of the year, crowds in this area were a mixture of dedicated shoppers, impatient husbands, kids eyeing Santa and some looking for something to do.

"I'm waiting, my son's sleeping in this stroller, and my wife's shopping," said a Morton Grove man perched on a ledge in front of J.C. Penney's. "We're definitely buying today. We want to get as much shopping done as possible."

Kids' holiday programs planned at village library

Four holiday programs at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 500 N. Dunton Ave., have been specially designed for children.

There is no fee or advance registration required for any of the programs which are open to all children in the area. The following events are planned.

• A tree trimming party, 4 to 5 p.m. Friday. Children in grades one through five are encouraged to bring one special ornament they have made to hang on the Christmas tree in the library's children's department.

The party will start in the Dunton Room and include holiday stories, guitar music by Ron Ford of the bookmobile staff, treats and the tree trimming.

• The fourth annual Christmas puppet show, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6. The library's Puppet-Tree-Players have prepared two stories — "The Queen's Christmas Cake" and a contemporary version of "Twas the Night Before Christmas." The program is for children age 6 years and older.

• A preschool holiday party, 10 a.m. Friday, Dec. 12. Preschoolers are invited to attend a program of films including "The Snowman's Dilemma," "The Snowman," and "The Mole and the Green Star," plus a rollicking scene by the library puppets.

• Irish dances, Hebrew choir songs, Lithuanian string music, Ukranian costumes and dance and a German program will be presented to children age 6 and older at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 13.

Interesting bits about coins

with Grace Carolyn

Usually I separate "Collecting" from "Coin Collecting" because I feel that numismatics is a field in itself and requires a great deal of specialized knowledge. All I know of coins is from listening to the men in this house who, over the years, have collected coins.

I learned two things in particular: always look at your pennies before you spend them (a good idea in any case, for it's the last you'll see of them) to make sure there isn't a 1909 SVDB, whatever that is. Also, don't take a real silver Liberty dime out of your husband's cigar box to make the right change for the egg man.

But recently, I received a complimentary subscription to Coin World, a weekly newspaper dedicated to those buffs who count their pennies and polish their buffaloes, and there are some interesting things to read in its pages. Also, I received a little booklet, "A Bicentennial Numismatic Quiz."

Without this booklet I would never know the following bits of trivia to spring on the girls in the teachers' lounge:

• Who were two top figures in Revolutionary history who have appeared on U.S. coinage minted in 1899? (George Washington and Lafayette.)

• What coin first bore a reference to the United States? (Nova Constellatio silver and copper of 1783. The booklet didn't explain why it sounds Italian.)

• The eagle is our national bird, although Benjamin Franklin proposed the turkey. What other bird was suggested?

(The goose, by one Judge Thatcher, who considered the goose "a most humble and republican bird.") I would add that cooked for Thanksgiving, the goose becomes quite democratic. There are a hundred of these questions in the booklet!

Here are a couple more:

• All the individuals on regular issue coins of the U.S. have been Presidents except one — who is he? (Benjamin Franklin, who appears on the half dollar.) Another aside: How come there aren't any women?

• Name the first colony to issue paper money. (The Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1690.)

• Where did the expression "bit" as in "two bits" come from? (Spanish milled dollars which often circulated in the American colonies were cut into pieces or bits to serve as smaller denomination coins.)

I'm sure you have seen examples of the Bicentennial coins. The little booklet also tells who designed them. Jack Ahr (of Arlington Heights) did the drummer boy on the quarter, Seth Huntington the Independence Hall on the half dollar and Dennis Williams the Liberty Bell and moon on the dollar. (Pictures courtesy Coin World.)

You may receive a copy of the Bicentennial Numismatic Quiz booklet by sending 25 cents to Coin World, P.O. Box 150, Sidney, Ohio 45365. Please mention you saw this offer in "Collecting with Grace Carolyn," Paddock Publications, Arlington Heights, Ill. The regular price of the booklet at stores is $1 so this is a good Bicentennial bargain.

While you're looking at the coin pictures, study the one of Eisenhower particularly, on the dollar. At lunch the other day, one of the ladies pointed out that she thinks it looks more like Gerald Ford. But we were having lunch at the Time-Out Lounge.

(If you have questions, please write me, enclosing SASE, in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Il. 60006.)

Mainzer-Poehler rites feature fall colorings

Fall shades of persimmon and rust prevailed at the Nov. 1 wedding of Constance L. Mainzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Mainzer, Mount Prospect, and Arthur L. Poehler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Poehler, Glenview.

For the double ring ceremony, Constance chose a Qiana gown trimmed in lace, beads and sequins. Her elbow-length veil was trimmed with matching lace and she carried a bouquet of orchids, roses and baby's breath.

The bride's sister, Cynthia, was maid of honor. She wore a rust Qiana dress with matching jacket and carried a bouquet of roses, baby's breath and mums.

Jenifer Wood, 3, the bride's goddaughter from Cleveland, Ohio, was flower girl for the 5 p.m. wedding held in St. Mark Lutheran Church, Mount Prospect. She approached the altar on the arm of ring bearer, Craig Medley, 6, the bride's cousin from North Olmsted, Ohio.

CHARLES POEHLER, Wheeling, served as his brother's best man. Ushers were Bob Kubis, Hinsdale; Bill Wilde, Chicago; Jack Fitzpatrick, Arlington Heights; Mick Kitterman, Chicago; Mike Yorke, Arlington Heights; and the bride's brother Todd.

Following the wedding a reception for 230 guests was held at Allegretti's Four Horsemen in Rosemont. The couple will take a belated honeymoon in the spring and is now residing in a Hinsdale apartment.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Poehler

A 1970 graduate of Hersey High Shool, Constance also attended Western Illinois University and is employed at Jensen and Halstead Ltd., Chicago, an architectural engineering firm. Barbara Hansen's birthday was also her wedding day

A special date, her 21st birthday, was chosen by Barbara J. Hansen of Palatine for her marriage to William R. Kempisty of Arlington Heights. The day was Oct. 19, which was also Sweetest Day, so there was much to celebrate at the bridal couple's dinner reception late that afternoon at Arlington Heights Elks Club.

Barbara and Bill were married at 2:30 p.m. in St. Thomas of Villanova Church, Palatine. After the reception for 130 guests, the newlyweds left for 10 days in Florida.

Bill works at Arlington Park Shell Station where the couple met when Barbara stopped for gas three years ago. She is employed in Mount Prospect by Commonwealth Edison Co.

BARBARA IS the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald E. Hansen, and Bill's parents are the Vito Kempistys.

The bride's sister, Janet, was her maid of honor, preceded down the aisle by four bridesmaids: Dee Hall of Palatine, also a sister of the bride; Jane Handley, Des Plaines; Connie DeRossett, Bensenville; and Mickey Abel, Chicago.

Glenn Abel, Chicago, was Bill's best man, and ushering were Terry Hall, Palatine; Jerry Hansen Jr., the bride's brother; and Joe and Richard Kempisty, the groom's brothers.

The newlyweds are living in Palatine.

Barbara graduated from Palatine High School and Bill from Arlington High School, then attending the University of Illinois Circle Campus for three years.

Diabetes often causes fatigue

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

I am a male, age 60, and have known of my diabetic condition for over six years. My problem is low energy about 60 per cent of the time and sore heels if I walk too much.

My doctor put me on three Orinase tablets per day at first, then about two years ago put me on one DBI capsule a day. My morning fasting blood sugar tests run from 130 to 150, and my urine tests are plus one most of the time on the test tape. My blood pressure is normal, and my weight is within my doctor's limits. I use no table sugar, but do use artificial sweeteners moderately.

Do you have any suggestions to raise my energy level? Until about six years ago I could outwork and outwalk most people my age, now it is just the opposite.

One of the symptoms diabetics may have is fatigue. It may be the symptom that leads to diagnosis.

The basic problem in diabetes is the lack of insulin action to enable glucose (sugar) to enter the cells. The glucose sugar is the form that all your carbohydrates and part of your protein are converted to for the cells to break them down and release energy. When the glucose can't get into the cells, the blood level goes down. Remember your energy must come from breaking down food in the cell to release food energy.

For a more complete discussion on how diabetes works, you should send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 3-10, Diabetes: The Sweet Sickness. Write to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. This will give you a better idea of what diabetes does to the body and why.

Insulin, as explained in The Health Letter, reverses the problem and releases energy from food. At the same time this lowers the blood glucose (sugar) level. Its action is not the same as you get from the oral diabetic pills and capsules.

You should know that the Food and Drug Administration has considered putting a warning label on oral diabetic medications, about their potential dangers. This may already have been done by the time this column appears. I think any patient on these medicines should review his status with his doctor and consider treatment with diet alone or if that cannot be done, the advisability of using insulin.

In your case with your energy problem, I would seriously wonder if you might not get far more energy by using insulin for the basic reasons I have mentioned here.

I have heard that there is a lot of food value in beer and that it also helps to restore your memory. Is this true?

That's mostly wishful thinking. Beer contains a lot of calories, nearly 200 in a pint. Those calories come from its alcohol content. It does not contain any important amounts of vitamins or minerals or provide any bulk.

Far from improving your memory, an excess, regular intake of beer damages brain cells and leads to loss of mental ability. At autopsy, the brain from the alcoholic is often shrinken and gives the appearance of premature aging.

Overwatering will kill

Dear Dorothy: Like so many other of my friends, I've become a great fan of house plants. Unhappily, I lack a "green thumb" and I've lost half a dozen beauties the past few months. Someone at the office said I might be overwatering. It could easily be. But how does one really know what's too much or too little?—Helen Sucherman

You've summarized two big items in one short letter. Indoor plants have become a major avocation (and industry) in this country. And more of these plants have been killed by overzealous watering than any other thing. Most of the roots of ordinary house plants are in the bottom two-thirds of the pot. Hence, when water runs out of the bottom you've adequately watered the roots. You've also washed out the excess salts from fertilizer residue.

That's fine, but never let the pot sit in this water. Spill out the water and let the plant do its own thing. A good rule for a six-inch pot is to stick your index finger about two inches into the soil. If the soil feels damp, don't water. For smaller pots, the feeling depth is not that deep. When the soil is dry and rather hard, water. For the novice, there is a mechanical tester to do this job, but it's not cheap. Take it easy on the watering and your plants should thrive.

Dear Dorothy: I have a drawer full of slipover sweaters and every once in a while wish one might be a cardigan—to throw around my shoulders when I feel cool. I've heard one can convert slipovers to cardigans. Do you know whether it's difficult to do?—Clarice Huddleston.

I saw one not long ago and the "perpetrator" said it had been relatively easy. She ran a double row of machine stitching up the middle of the sweater front. Then she cut between the stitching and after turning the edges under bound them with grosgrain ribbon. I'd think one might also use braid instead of the ribbon.

Groups sell luminaria kits

U.S. adopts Mexican custom

Last Christmas Eve seemingly endless rows of glowing luminaria lined thousands of suburban driveways, private walks, city sidewalks and cul de sacs. It was a beautiful sight.

An age old custom from Mexico, luminariarnow glow in thousands of towns and villages in the United States. The original Mexican versions were small piles of burning pinon wood to light Christ's way on Christmas Eve. Today they are plumbers' candles inside a brown paper bag with enough sand to hold the candle erect.

TO CREATE A luminaria fold the top of a No. 12 flat bottom brown paper bag down twice, 1½ inches each time to form a strong cuff. Then put three cupsful of sand in the bottom of the bag.

Place the 5-inch tall by 1¼ inch candle in the middle of the sand. Place no further apart than 10 feet in a single row to line the walk or drive.

Several area organizations are selling luminaria kits this year. On Friday and Saturday, Dec. 5 and 6, Elk Grove Juniors will be selling kits of six luminaria for $1.25 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at two locations in Elk Grove Village: Mobil Station and the Bank of Elk Grove at Park and Shop Shopping Center, both at Arlington Heights and Higgins Roads.

PALATINE CENTER of Infant Welfare will be selling kits of five luminaria for $1 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 13 and 14, in front of Nelson's BoKay Shoppe, 145 S. Bothwell, Palatine. Mount Prospect Juniors will be selling kits of six for $1 Saturday, Dec. 13, at the Community Center, 600 We-Go Trail, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Sponsoring groups ask that those buying in quantity bring their own containers for sand. One wastebasket-sized bucket holds enough sand for 15 candles. Those wishing to order 200 or more candles ($15) may call Mrs. Dennis Gobel of Infant Welfare at 325-5829.

Mass lighting begins at 6 o'clock Christmas Eve, or if the weather is bad, at 6 Christmas night.

IT'S JUST A CANDLE set in sand inside a brown paper bag, but an unbroken chain of these lights stretching as far as the eye can see is a truly breathtaking sight on Christmas Eve. Organizations selling luminaria kits hope all homeowners as well as churches, schools, libraries, town halls and libraries will light up this year as the custom grows in the suburbs.

Abortion law problems seen

The newest Illinois abortion law appears to be a short-lived menace which never should have been enacted by the Illinois General Assembly.

Before the clamor died down over the override of Governor Walker's veto, a U.S. District Court judge in Chicago last week issued a restraining order to delay enforcement of the new law.

Ruling on behalf of Illinois doctors, Judge Prentice H. Marshall said that the law faces a tough challenge: "I really think all of us know that the grave constitutional problems of the statute are such that in all likelihood the plaintiffs do not face serious jeopardy."

That's what we've said, too. This law is little more than a nuisance, almost certain to be tossed out of court.

The problem is that Illinois already has a perfectly workable law which permits abortions under safe and sanitary conditions. The newest law is nothing more than an attempt by abortion foes to undercut the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to allow abortions.

The most obnoxious portion of the new law is the requirement that married women, and women under 18 years of age, must have the written permission of their husbands or their parents to have an abortion.

All this provision will accomplish is to encourage women to seek illegal abortions at the hands of persons whose first concern is not necessarily a safe abortion. It will not discourage women to reject abortions; rather, it will jeopardize the lives of more women and girls.

As we've stated many times before, the point of an Illinois law permitting abortions is to allow a woman to make up her mind in matters as important as these.

Until the new law clouded the issue last week, the state had allowed women to make the decision themselves. To preserve the freedom of choice, the U.S. District Court should throw out the General Assembly's latest meddlesome attempt as quickly as possible.

The Illinois General Assembly sent me.

Today is Saturday, Nov. 29, the 333rd day of 1975 with 32 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Sagittarius.

American author Louisa May Alcott was born Nov. 29, 1832.

On this day in history:

• In 1890, the first Army-Navy football game was played. The Middies won, 24-0.

• In 1929, Lt. Cmdr. Richard Byrd and three crewmen became the first persons to fly over the South Pole.

• In 1963, a Canadian plane crash near Montreal killed 118 persons. Also in 1963, President Lyndon Johnson appointed the Warren Commission to investigate the assassination of President John Kennedy.

• In 1974, three court-appointed doctors said former President Nixon would be unable to testify at the Watergate coverup trial before mid-February.

'Tis the Christmas list jitters time

by DOROTHY MEYER

If your house is anything like my house, Thanksgiving Day is not only a time of too much turkey and television, it is also first call for, "What do you want for Christmas?"

Everybody's always full of ideas of course, but this year I leaned heavily on the word "reasonable" and said that nobody was getting anything bigger than a breadbox.

I reminded them of:

Last year: when the only way I could get from the doorway and into bed past the snowplow blade and a five-foot-long air hockey game hiding in my bedroom was to break the Olympic record for the standing broad jump.

AND THE YEAR before that: when I had to ride a hassock sidesaddle down an escalator because if I didn't take it right now the store wouldn't guarantee delivery before Christmas.

DOROTHY MEYER

And a few years before that: then I bopped a pogo stick down the stairs (they wouldn't let me on the escalator with it) to the gift wrap department. Where I was immediately rejected on the basis of how did I expect them to wrap a pogo stick so it wouldn't look like a pogo stick?

And then there was the year: when my sons wanted to make hammered aluminum trays for all their female relatives and Mom was the one who had to buy two 4x6 sheets of aluminum and carry it three blocks to the car with a 40-mile-an-hour tail wind. And I got a ticket for going 25 mph in a 20 mph zone. On foot, yet.

"In this year of 1975," I concluded, "let us be reasonable; who wants cufflinks?"

There was a long silence and then Number One son said, "Dear mother, I need cufflinks like I need French cuffed shirts which I have not seen on the market for lo these many years. However, I have a wish that is of course ridiculous because it's too expensive, but at least it is smaller than a breadbox."

"SPEAK UP, DEAR son," I said, "maybe SOMEBODY can afford it, what is this heart's desire of yours?"

"I wish I had a citizen's band radio for my van, it costs $200."

And I said "Don't be ridiculous, Dumdum, that's too expensive, are you sure you woundn't like a nice pair of onyx cufflinks?

Next I agreed with everyone else who said their wish was too expensive, and we ate.

I think I'll get everyone a small breadbox.

We back oil recycling

The City of Des Plaines is one of three Illinois communities which is cooperating in an experimental motor oil recycling program that we endorse.

The city has installed a 300-gallon underground storage tank at its community recycling center, Oakton Street east of Lee Street. For the past six months an increasing number of residents have deposited a total of 1,500 gallons of used motor oil at the center.

The oil recycling is a pilot program sponsored by the Illinois Dept. of Business and Economic Development and is scheduled to end in 1977. If it succeeds, the results will be included in a proposal to make motor oil recycling mandatory in Illinois.

The recycling program is worthwhile, and we commend Des Plaines officials for working with the Dept. of Business and Economic Development during this trial period. Other suburban communities should be aware of the Des Plaines experiment and think seriously of including motor oil in their recycling efforts.

Officials estimate that 22 million gallons of motor oil are purchased in the state each year but only 50,000 gallons are recycled. About 60 per cent of the motor oil collected can be refined into usable oil, with the remainder used to operate the recycling plant.

With our natural resources at a premium, such recycling programs are very valuable.

U. S. mail has bad idea

At the rate they're going, perhaps they should discard that slogan about "neither sleet, nor rain, nor gloom of night."

The latest bad idea from the U.S. Postal Service is to abandon Saturday mail delivery. Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar recently said it might be a necessity because of the Postal Service's "grave financial situation."

By itself, the service cut is disturbing. On top of the upcoming three-cent hike in first-class rates on Jan. 1, it's an outrage.

It almost seems that the Postal Service has forgotten that its job is to deliver the mail, not talk of abandoning delivery. If it's losing $250,000 an hour, as Bailar says, he should consider other cuts first. After all, the mail is supposed to go through.

Elk Grove trustee's stand hit

In the Saturday, Nov. 14 issue of the Elk Grove Village Herald, Edward W. Kenna Jr., a trustee of the village, accused Michael Smith, Illinois Senate candidate, formerly of the Governor's Consumer Advocate Office, of using unhappy homeowners as a means to getting elected.

I feel I must comment on this accusation. The cards are on the table; Mr. Kenna is either reading them wrong, or ignoring them.

The "unhappy homeowners" originally started with the defective furnace issue. To date, this issue still has not been resolved to the satisfaction of the residents.

The residents of the Winston Grove area, as well as residents from other areas of the village, have attended meetings of the board of trustees religiously; they have been ignored, intimidated and just plain "turned off" by the board.

When a person cannot get backing from his own village board of trustees, he must go to another source for assistance. This source was the Governor's Consumer Advocate Office and Michael Smith. We sought out Smith; Smith did not come to us seeking an issue which would put him in the public eye and help to get him elected to a political office.

After "getting into" the furnace issue and the shoddy workmanship problems throughout the village, Mr. Smith saw the need for legislation and the need to put ethics back into government at all levels. This is what prompted Mr. Smith to run for the Illinois Senate.

I FEEL THAT MR. Kenna and the Elk Grove Village Board of Trustees owes Michael Smith an apology. Mr. Smith has offered to work with the board, but he, too, has been "turned off." The board should be thanking him for his interest and assistance; instead, they treat him like "public enemy number one"!

I thought the board of trustees was supposed to represent and work for the residents of the village. I have not seen this demonstrated to date. We have an election coming up; maybe we can right this wrong.

Speaking of "using people and issues," Mr. Kenna, you certainly have been making a lot of noise in the local paper of late. Could it be possible that the ground-work is being laid for the village president's chair? Time will tell; but before going any further, may I suggest that you have the village buy a good dictionary — especially for use by the building department. I am sure this would greatly help the board of trustees and the building department in carrying out their duties — more precisely, enabling it to enforce our building code by defining "workmanlike manner" and "workmanship," a phrase and a word which you personally told me could not be defined. As they could not be defined, our building code could not be enforced, so you told me. Webster's New World Dictionary, College Edition, Copyright, 1955, does not seem to have any trouble defining these words; I do not understand why the board of trustees and the building department cannot cope with them.

Mr. Kenna, I also do not understand why the board of trustees has chosen to take a stand against the residents, and against anyone who tries to help the residents. As long as this stand persists, the board and the residents will continue to be at each other's throats. What a pity; we could accomplish so much more by working together toward the happiness and well being of the village residents.

IN CONCLUSION, I hope to hear that you, Mr. Kenna, and the Elk Grove Village Board of Trustees have made amends with Mr. Smith. You should be proud that one of our village residents has the qualifications and the interest to run for a state office. I think he should be encouraged in his endeavor, not put down, as the case has unfolded to date.

Safety of Biesterfield area children cited

I would like to respond to the letter from Mr. Jerry Capizzi, president of the Elk Grove Association of Industry and Commerce, who supports the extension of Biesterfield Road.

It is true that the extension "will provide more efficient access to our commercial community," but the children of Elk Grove Village do not need any more industrial park traffic taking short-cuts through the residential part of our community to get to and from work. There are five schools, a community center, a swimming pool, an ice skating rink, two parks and a public library within a one-half mile radius of one another near Elk Grove Boulevard and Kennedy Boulevard (Biesterfield Road).

We have a high concentration of children in the area constantly — children from all over the village as well as neighborhood children.

Our home faces the intersection of Kennedy Blvd. and Brantwood. I have repeatedly seen drivers not yielding to children crossing within a crosswalk at the stop sign. I have heard the shriek of brakes and even the clang of a car smashing into a house, narrowly missing children returnining from school. On one occasion my husband had to inform neighbors that their daughter was hit by a car. All this frightens me!

I urge the trustees of Elk Grove Village to give the extension of Biesterfield Road serious thought and I urge the parents of this village to wake up and be heard!

UCLA captures Rose Bowl spot opposite Ohio State

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The UCLA Bruins overcame nine turnovers, eight of them fumbles, to beat arch-rival University of Southern California 25-22 Friday night and gain their first Rose Bowl berth in 10 years.

The victory gave the mistake-ridden Bruins a share of the Pacific-8 title with California with a 6-1 record. They'll go to Pasadena on New Year's Day for a rematch with Ohio State, the Big Ten champion, on the basis of their 28-14 victory win over Cal.

John Sciarra passed to tight end Don Pederson for two touchdowns, including a 19-yarder that put the Bruins ahead 25-14 with just 42 seconds gone in the second half.

The Bruins, who completed their regular season with an 8-2-1 record, did everything they could to present the game to the Trojans in USC head coach John McKay's finale at the Coliseum. They coughed up the ball seven times in the second half, six of them on fumbles. They had 11 fumbles in the game and lost eight of them.

For the Liberty Bowl-bound Trojans, it was their fourth consecutive defeat since McKay announced he was leaving USC to coach the new NFL Tampa Bay Buccaneers next season.

UCLA, which last appeared in the Rose Bowl in 1966, rolled up 23 first downs and 414 total yards, but nearly killed itself. Wendell Tyler nearly matched Ricky Bell's statistics and sprinted 57 yards for the Bruins' second touchdown, but fumbled four times.

Eddie Ayers, the other starting halfback in the UCLA veer, fumbled twice.

Bell brought the Trojans to within three points with a three-yard touchdown run and a two-point conversion run with only three seconds gone in the fourth quarter. USC's crack junior tailback rushed 26 times for 136 yards, but failed by seven yards to break Ed Marinaro's single-season NCAA rushing record. He finished with 1,875 in 11 regular-season games.

USC simply did not cash in on all the Bruin miscues. After Kenny Lee of UCLA fumbled on the Bruin 44, the Trojans' Rod Martin recovered the ball with 1:21 left in the game to give his team one final chance.

Trojan quarterback Vince Evans, on a fourth and 20 situation on the USC 35, passed 22 yards to Dennis Thurman to put the ball on the UCLA 43 with 44 seconds to go.

An Evans-to-Bell pass put the ball on the Bruin 36, but three plays failed to gain anything and the Bruins took over the ball with 21 seconds left and ran out the clock.

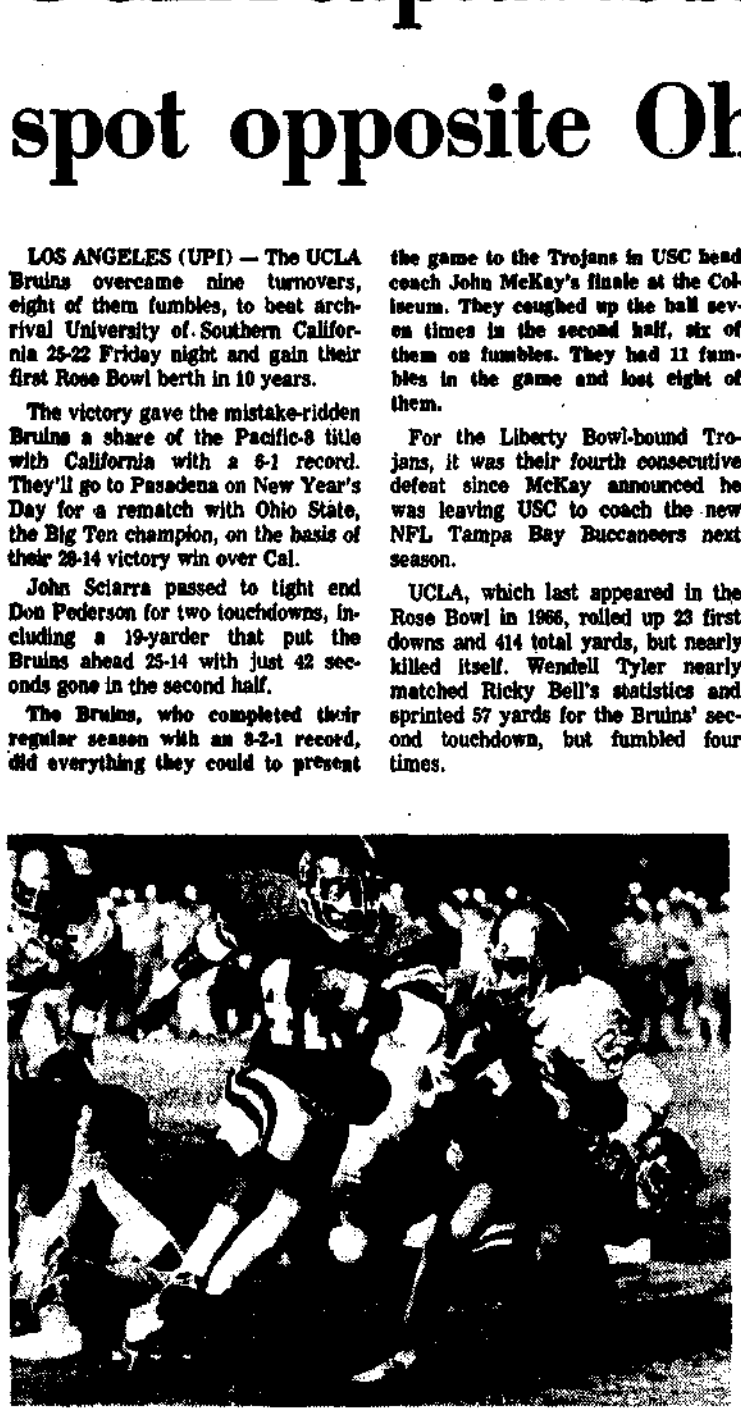
UCLA, a two-point favorite, grabbed an 18-14 halftime lead on an 18-yard Sciarra to Pederson pass at 9:21 of the second quarter.

Tyler's dazzling 57-yard run at 3:05 of the second period brought UCLA back from a 14-6 deficit to make the score 14-12.

USC took the game's opening kickoff and marched 71 yards in 11 plays with Bell going into the end zone on a one-yard run with just 4:04 expired.

UCLA came back and closed the gap to 7-6 on a five-yard touchdown run by Ayers at 14:26 of the first period.

Evans made it 14-6 for USC at 1:46 of the second quarter when he rolled four yards around right end for his team's second score.



RICKY BELL of USC picks up 18 yards as UCLA's Terry Tautolo (56) closes in during dramatic cross-town rivalry Friday night. UCLA earned a spot in the Rose Bowl, 25-22.

OPENING ACTION. The gymnastics season shifted into high gear Friday night as defending Mid-Suburban League champion Hersey hosted the York Dukes in a dual meet. Ray Peters, performing on trampoline, helped the Huskies come from behind for a 134.18 to 133.71 victory.

A Herald staff report

The batting average still isn't that good, but it's getting a little better.

Area high school teams hit 6-for-14 Friday night, collecting six victories as holiday basketball play continued.

WHEELING REBOUNDS

Brian Begrowicz and Keith Schildt combined for 44 points Friday night as Wheeling belted Marian Central, 76-54 in the consolation bracket of the Woodstock Thanksgiving Tournament. The Wildcats will face the host school today at 5:30 for the consolation bracket title.

After a sluggish performance in their opening loss to Grant, the Wildcats came out gunning against Marian as Schildt fired in 18 of his 21 points in the first half.

Wheeling jumped on top, 13-8 after the first quarter and with Brian Begrowicz dumping in a game-high 23, the 'Cats increased their advantage to 38-28 at the intermission and never looked back.

Dave Schultz complemented his two high-scoring teammates with a dozen points and Al Begrowicz chipped in with six assists. Wheeling outrebounded Marian, 34-17.

HUSKIES IN ROMP

Hersey shot out to a 17-1 lead and then coasted in with a one-sided 74-55 victory over St. Francis of Wheaton in the Glenbard West Tournament.

Coach Roger Steingraber's Huskies clamped on a full-court, man-to-man press at the outset, and St. Francis couldn't adjust, quickly falling behind by 16 points.

Steingraber inserted his reserves for the second period and the Huskies carried a 37-30 lead into the locker-room. The regulars came back in the third period but never regained their momentum and although never in trouble couldn't pad the advantage.

Hersey shot 29-of-61 from the field and held St. Francis to just 15 baskets and only 46 shots. The losers did count 25 times from the free throw line.

Hersey returns to play at 3:45 p.m. today in Glen Ellyn against Glenbard South.

SAXONS BLAST CROWN

The Schaumburg Saxons rode the 25 point scoring of 6-6 sophomore center John Chmiel to a 77-51 victory over Irving Crown Friday night in holiday tournament action.

Chmiel was helped by three other double figure performers as Schaumburg improved their season mark to 2-0. The Saxons will play twice today, meeting Rockford Jefferson at 2 p.m. and returning to action at 7 p.m. against West Leyden.

Jon McIlraith fired in 18 points for Schaumburg and did a superb defensive job on Crown's high-scoring senior, Dale Bernard. Bernard finished with 19 points but got 13 of them in the first half and was held to a pair of baskets in the second half by McIlraith.

Ed Chmiel chipped in 15 points and Dan Breen 11 to round out the Saxons' double digit shooters.

Schaumburg had a 34-21 lead late in the first half and Crown sliced that to 36-31 early in the second half before John Chmiel and McIlraith hit a pair of baskets apiece to put the Schaumburg lead at 12 and the game out of reach.

PALATINE PREVAILS, 53-44

Palatine waited until the fourth quarter to get its offense untracked, but an 18-8 scoring spree was more than enough to pin a 53-44 defeat on Wauconda in the Lake Zurich Thanksgiving Tournament Friday night.

After jumping on top, 14-2 late in the first period, Palatine found its lead eroded to a one-point deficit after three quarters, 36-35.

Bulls snap loss streak with win over Milwaukee

Matt Guokas, Bob Love and Mickey Johnson combined for 14 straight points in eight minutes Friday night, enabling the Chicago Bulls to snap a nine-game losing streak with an 89-69 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

The game was tied at 58-all when Chicago scored 14 straight points — six by Guokas, four by Johnson, who had a career-high 21 rebounds, and four by Love, who took game scoring honors with 24 points.

The 69-point total was the fewest number of points ever allowed by a Chicago Bulls' team. It also extended Milwaukee's losing streak to four games.

The game was tied 35-all at the half and Chicago held a slim three-point lead after three periods.

The Bulls shot 52 per cent from the field in the final period. Milwaukee shot 27 per cent.

Brian Winters led Milwaukee with 13 points, Elmore Smith had 12.

Are Packers on upswing? Bears make visit Sunday

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — Pro football's oldest rivalry resumes Sunday and Green Bay Coach Bart Starr would like nothing better than to use it to show the hometown fans just how much the Packers are improved.

The problem is the game is against the Chicago Bears and when these two teams meet, records and past performances don't mean much.

As Starr put it Friday "The Bears are always tough. It's going to be a very, very tough ball game."

The meeting is the 113th between the two rivals and the second of the year. Chicago beat Green Bay 27-14 a couple of weeks ago when Chicago caught the Packers in one of their down cycles.

Green Bay, however, seems to be on an upswing and last Sunday's 40-14 win over the New York Giants is bound to give the Packers momentum going into the game. Oddsmakers see them as 10 point favorites.

Chicago was drubbed by Los Angeles 38-10 last week, but Bear Coach Jack Pardee is hopeful the happenings in the closing seconds of that game could inspire his charges. In that one, Bob Avellini passed 32 yards to Bo Rather for a touchdown with two seconds left.

"It may have been a meaningless touchdown," Pardee said. "But for us, it was a boost for the Packers."

Chicago will be trying for a season sweep against Green Bay — something that hasn't happened since 1963 when the Bears also won the National Football League title.

The Bears also are winless on the road in more than two years with their last road victory Nov. 4, 1973, at Green Bay.

Green Bay, however, has had problems winning in Lambeau Field and Starr would like to reverse that trend. The Packers have lost six of their last seven starts here.

Pardee knows things have changed since the last time he saw the Packers.

Kevin McKenna paced all scorers with 21 points while Pirate teammate Ken Reid chipped in with 11 and Mark McCostlin nine. Al Knotek, although scoring just two points, got Palatine untracked with his ball handling and assist help.

GRENS CRUSH LANCERS

Playing superbly in every phase of the game, Elk Grove ran previously undefeated Lake Park off the court in winning 68-39 at the Grenadiers' holiday tourney.

Grenadier coach Bill Parmentier called it a "super effort" and admitted his hustling team, now 2-0, couldn't have played any better. The Grens broke open the game in the second quarter after only leading 13-9. They forced 15 turnovers in that period while racing out to a 33-17 halftime advantage.

At one point in the third quarter they outscored the Lancers 19-4 to lead 52-21. They coasted the rest of the way.

Center Dave Hornacek led four scorers in double figures with 16 points. Mike Behm had 15, Mark Smith 13 and Joe Parmentier 11 as the winners hit on 50 per cent of their shots.

Parmentier accounted for 14 assists — his all-time high. Smith was tops in rebounding with five.

COUGARS FAIL TO NEW TRIER

New Trier West ripped open a close game in the third period and sent the Conant Cougars to their second defeat of the season 59-32 Friday night.

Conant trailed by only three points at halftime, 22-19, but could produce only four points in the third stanza as the Cowboys blew their lead up 15 points.

"We were right in the ballgame at halftime," said Conant coach Dick Redlinger, "But on offense we were passing up the open shot and shooting when we were covered."

Ron Sulaski paced the Cougars with 14 points and 15 rebounds while New Trier's Bob Cohen funneled in 15 to lead a balanced Cowboy scoring attack.

KNIGHTS TOPPLED, 52-45

Prospect spotted Maine South a 5-0 advantage, tied the game early in the first period, but never led after that as the Hawks posted a 52-45 triumph in the second round of the traveling round-robin Thanksgiving Tournament Friday night.

A dozen first-half turnovers plagued the Knight offense as Maine South opened a five-point spread after the first period and settled for a 25-21 lead at the intermission.

With center Russ Schmelzer pouring in 18 points on the night, Maine South boosted its margin to 39-29 after three periods before Prospect rallied to pull within the final seven-point margin.

Mike Wood paced the Knights with 15 points while Chris Etter chipped in with 14, but a glaring total of 19 turnovers thwarted the Knights' bid to get back into the game. Prospect meets Maine West tonight at Maine South at 8:30.

YORK TIPS CARDS

York held on against relentless pressure and finally tipped the Arlington Cardinals, 56-53, in the York Holiday Tournament.

Coach Don Drain's Cards kept the pressure on throughout the game and pulled within one point with 15 seconds remaining. A foul sent York's Pete Clancy to the foul line, and the 6-foot-5 star, who finished with 26 points, dropped in both free throws.

Arlington jumped in front 13-11 after one period and still was on top about three minutes into the second stanza. Then York, with Clancy and 6-foot-4 Bagge doing the work, marched into an advantage they didn't relinquish.

Jim Grandt, hitting effectively from outside, had 22 points for Arlington. Greg Kloiber chipped in with 16.

Arlington returns to the York floor tonight for a 7:00 game with Elgin.

FREMD FALTERS

Turnovers plagued the Vikings of Fremd as they suffered a 66-50 defeat to Glenbard South in the Glenbard West holiday attraction.

"Our inexperience showed and we just didn't move the ball well against their zone," said Viking coach Mo Tharp. "And then we had 28 turnovers overall."

Fremd moved to within two points early in the final period and had the basketball after a steal but missed the shot. They threw three bad passes on inbounds maneuvers, and Glenbard quickly had a cushion with 4:15 left.

"That was the game," said Tharp. "Instead of having it tied up they went ahead of us by 10."

Rick Kolze was high for Fremd with 11 points. Craig Rawlins and Rick Ramsey chipped in nine each.

Fremd returns to the floor today at 2:00 against St. Francis.

BLAZERS BLITZ HAWKS

Addison Trail took advantage of a second quarter cold streak by Hoffman Estates and went on to post a 78-60 victory at the Elk Grove Thanksgiving Tournament.

Hoffman Estates held a 20-19 lead after one period. But the second quarter saw the Hawks of coach Jerry Segebrecht only hit on three of 13 shots to trail 40-28 at the half.

The Trail Blazers pulled away after that en route to their third win in four games. Hoffman has just the opposite record.

Addison was led in scoring by 6-6 Steve Long and 6-4 Mike Kalasmiki with 20 points each. Scoring 14 points apiece for Hoffman were Joe Gajewski and Ron Warring.

FOREST VIEW FALLS

Hurt by a six-point second quarter and some stalling tactics in the final period, the Forest View Falcons lost to Crystal Lake at the third annual Woodstock tourney, 63-52.

After leading 18-14 at the end of the first quarter, the Falcons were outscored 20-6 in the second and couldn't regain the lead again.

Nate Adams was high man for the Falcons with 16. Ray Michaelsen had 12 and Jim O'Rourke 11. Bill Mosolino led Crystal Lake with 22.

BISON FLATTEN MUSTANGS

Fenton ignited its fast-break offense in the second half to earn a 69-51 triumph over Thanksgiving Tournament-hosting Rolling Meadows Friday night.

With the Bison leading 30-24 at halftime but the outcome still in the balance, Fenton outscored the Mustangs 16-10 in the third period and 23-17 down the stretch to gain the triumph.

Despite a strong inside attack featuring Bill Wissen who accounted for 15 points, Rolling Meadows couldn't handle Fenton's after-burner offense.

With Jim Garry hitting 24, Larry Lindahl 18 and Roy Sachse 17, in the game, Fenton transformed a 36-30 edge midway through the third period into a 46-34 command and never let up.

John Carbery and Dave Bell each chipped in eight points for Meadows while Noe Nunez accounted for a half-dozen. The Mustangs entertain Maine North in the tournament finale tonight at 8:30.

In the opener Friday night, Scott Mohr and Jim Karas each hit 18 and Ron Brooks 17 as Maine North topped Niles North, 76-65.

Chaps top Hawks, 89-64

The DuPage Chapparrals used their height advantage to hold down the Harper Hawks and win the first round of their holiday tournament 89-64 Friday.

"Believe it or not we looked fairly decent tonight," said Harper coach Roger Bechtold, who saw his team drop to 1-2 for the season. "But they had a lot of talent and their height started to wear on us in the second half. They could be the best junior college team in the state this year."

The Chaps' 6-10 center Jim Coutre flipped in 24 points to lead the scoring parade. Mike Ellis added 21 for DuPage.

Harper had three players in double figures, headed by sophomore guard Steve Loughman who popped in 18 points. Jim Arden added 15 and Scott Green 14.

DuPage opened a 41-29 halftime lead as the Hawks never held the lead. They will face off with Waubonsee tonight at 7:15 in the consolation game of the tournament.

"Loughman played a real fine game," Bechtold commented. "He hustled to the end and made some key steals.

"I was impressed with the way DuPage got up and down the floor. They're going to win a lot of ball games this year.

"It may look like a lopsided game but it wasn't. We did some good things, too, and it was just a fine college basketball game."

Unbeaten Aggies take emotional win from Texas

Firebrand linebackers Ed Simonini and Garth Ten Napel — leaders of the stingiest defense in college football — stymied the nation's highest scoring offense Friday to preserve a 20-10 victory by unbeaten Texas A&M over Texas and set up a Southwest Conference championship showdown next week between the Aggies and Arkansas.

The emotional victory for the second-ranked Aggies ended a seven-year winning streak for Texas in the 82-year-old rivalry. It was only the second A&M win over the Longhorns in the last 21 years.

Fifth-ranked Texas came into the game averaging 35 points a game, but ailing quarterback Marty Akins went out in the first half and the Aggie defense — ranked No. 1 all year — put down one bid after another by the Longhorns to take the lead in the second half.

Texas A&M ran its season record to 10-0 and can record its first undefeated, untied season since 1939, win the SWC title outright and capture a berth in the Cotton Bowl with a decision in Little Rock next Saturday against Arkansas.

But an Arkansas triumph would throw the league title into a three-way tie between A&M, Texas and the Razorbacks and put Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl because the other two have been there more recently than the Razorbacks. Texas' loss Friday relegated the Longhorns, who finished with a 9-2 record, the Astro-Bluebonnett Bowl where they will meet Colorado.

Hocky star Orr sees his doctor

Bobby Orr, bothered by persistent pain in his left knee, Friday got off the Boston Bruins' Chicago-bound flight before the plane departed and went to see his doctor.

Orr, who returned to action Nov. 8 following the fourth operation on the knee during the preseason, told Coach Don Cherry of the continuing pain as the plane prepared to leave Logan International Airport.

"As soon as he spoke to me, I told him the wisest thing to do was to stay in Boston and have it examined by Dr. (Carter) Rowe," Cherry said in Chicago where the Bruins meet the Black Hawks Saturday night.

A team spokesman said Dr. Rowe, who performed the last three operations on Orr's knee, examined the star defenseman Friday and planned "a more extensive examination" for Saturday. It was not known how long he would be out of action but he was not expected to play Saturday night.

TEXAS quarterback Marty Akins (10) gets hit hard after making a pitch to Jimmy Walker (34) on his first play from scrimmage Friday against Texas A & M. Akins hobbled off the field, came back but had to leave again with an injury.

Will Indiana be 'ready' for NCAA champ UCLA?

The nation's top-rated college basketball team in pre-season polls may not be ready to take on NCAA champion UCLA Saturday when the two premier college cage squads clash in a nationally-televised (10:30) contest opening the season.

Hoosier coach Bobby Knight complained that he can't give his squad enough of a test because of the rule that limits preseason practice to intrasquad games.

"Each team should be allowed three preseason scrimmages against other schools," he said. "To me, the hardest part of practice is when they play against each other. It's tough having to evaluate your players that way."

For UCLA it will be the first contest since John Wooden retired after 27 years, including 10 national championship years in the past 12.

Under new coach Gene Bartow, the Bruins can be expected to provide a fairly definitive test of whether the Hooslers are ready to defend their ranking in the polls.

Knight said his talent-loaded club, led by All-America forward Scott May and center Kent Benson, is looking forward to the UCLA game.

"It gives us an opportunity to play an exceptionally good basketball team," he said. "We asked our kids last year if they would like to play them and they were all in favor. It's a big challenge for us."

Preps get 'burned'

TAUNTON, Mass. (UPI) — Eight high school football players were admitted to Morton Hospital Friday for treatment of second degree lime burns they received in a Thanksgiving Day game.

Officials said 25 players were treated for the burns immediately after the game but were not admitted. Eight returned after finding the burns were more serious than was originally believed.

The burns were picked up by players on both teams from the lime used to mark the field.

Frustration is encountering domestic birds

WRONG WAY retriever. John Sanborn of Milwaukee, Wis. gets the jump on his black Labrador before the over-anxious pooch has an opportunity to run down tame ducks at Juneau Park lagoon.

While most fishermen are hibernating...

Imaginative anglers cash checks

With only the most diehard fishermen still carrying gear in the trunks of their cars, most anglers have surrendered to the elements and are braced for the long seige of winter.

A few will make a token appearance once the ice has frozen to a safe depth over his favorite fishing hole, but for the most part, the fishing season is over.

Instead of watching his fishing lures get rusty, though, fishermen could be earning a nice chunk of money if he'd just let his mind wander.

Perhaps the most inventive in his sport, the angler has devised, created and produced some of the greatest little gadgets, aids and techniques imaginable.

Some are surely discovered by accident, but many are simply thoughtless or purely coincidental innovations that are revolutionizing the industry into a technologically-advanced and sophisticated pastime.

No longer is the freshwater fisherman content to pursue all species with one particular lure or bait. Instead, he carries a myriad of artificial plugs specifically designed for bass, walleyes, northern pike, muskies, perch, catfish, salmon and trout and who knows what else.

He has trays of flies, plastic worms, pork rinds, bucktails, flashers, dodgers, spinners, spoons, divers, floaters and jigs.

That's not to mention the accessories such as bobbers, sinkers, line, leaders and swivels.

The point is that everyone experiments with their equipment . . . maybe applying a piece of fluorescent tape to that spoon, or threading that nightcrawler to make the hook weedless.

Fishermen's secrets are probably better kept than the Pentagon Papers and some anglers, with a marketable idea, could be losing money.

Every year, the U.S. Patent office issues over 70,000 patents for novel inventions, earning the inventors national recognition for their ideas, and sometimes a substantial increase in annual income as well.

According to Raymond Lee, founder and President of the New York-based international invention development firm, the Raymond Lee Organization, "Most inventions relate directly to the occupation, home or hobby of the inventor."

For example, one of a fisherman's most awkward problems is what to do with those rubber boots and waders when they're not in use. They don't hang, they don't stand. If folded, the rubber cracks.

Roy Emrich of San Francisco solved the problem by inventing a hanger for boots and waders that can either be molded onto the boot during manufacture or easily attached afterwards.

It consists of a rubber pad that is mounted on the boot sole, in front of the heel. A hook can be inserted through it to allow the waders to be hung upside down on any convenient hook or nail.

Saltwater fishing has its share of inspiration, too. Miller Easom of Hollis, N.Y. was fond of taking charter fishing boats out for some deep sea fishing. It was his unfortunate experience, however, that with several people on board, everyone casting at the same time made a pathetic snarl of the lines.

As a merchant seaman, Easom invented the rifle cast fishing rod. In actuality, it is a fishing rod that is also the barrel of an air-powered rifle.

By pulling the trigger, the hook and line can be "shot" out far away from the boat. It also proved very useful for the handicapped or arthritic whose arm or torso movements were restricted.

All fishermen are familiar with the risks involved in carrying a fishing rod with the hook still attached.

Rather than continue as a potential pin cushion, Ellis Toddington of Winterburn, Alberta, invented a small device that slips over the fishing line and the hook to keep it safely covered in transit.

If you have potential product or idea, the Raymond Lee Organization is offering, free, information on development and marketing.

Who knows? Your idea may be worth more than just a stringer of fish.

Deadline set for snowmobile decal renewal

The Illinois Conservation Dept. permit office reports 13,800 snowmobile registrations expired Sept. 30, but only 4,000 have been renewed. Owners have until Dec. 15 to obtain the $6, 2-year renewal decals.

A re-allocation of new numbers would probably take a few days to process and with snow already covering much of the state, unregistered snowmobilers would be losing out on valuable operating time.

Procrastinators who run their machines illegally face a stiff fine.

State park closes

The Chain O' Lakes State Park, near Spring Grove, will be closed to campers now through December 8. The campsites will be closed for the duration of the "put-and-take" pheasant hunting season, which allows 90 hunters per day to use the park area on a permit basis.

Duck hunting will not interfere with camping as the waterfowl management area does not encompass the entire facility, but the large number of pheasant hunters using the recreation area requires the closing as a safety measure. Campers, hikers and other recreationists will be welcome back December 9.

Deer hunters on way to establishing mark

Outdoor Editor

Illinois shotgun hunters are well on their way to establishing a new record deer harvest after the opening three-day whitetail season, Nov. 21, 22 and 23.

Official figures released by the Illinois Department of Conservation indicated 11,613 deer were bagged this season compared to the 10,340 recorded during the same period last year in which hunters claimed a new state mark.

The second three-day segment of the shotgun deer season will be conducted Dec. 12, 13 and 14, but that total is historically far less than the opening period.

The top producing county was Pope in extreme southern Illinois with 463 deer bagged during the three-day campaign. Jo Daviess, in the far northwest region, claimed 469 whitetails.

Pike County, in west-central Illinois notched 422, while both Union and Hancock reported figures of 389. Adams produced 373 to rank sixth in the state, Johnson took 339, Williamson bagged 314, and Carroll tagged 318.

Although it was not required to weigh deer at the various check stations, a hunter in south Rock Island County reported he took an eight-point buck that went 265 pounds field dressed.

The first-half of the split season was generally uneventful in the accident department. Only one minor mishap blemished an otherwise perfect hunt from a safety standpoint.

One southern Illinois hunter's gun discharged while he was holding it at the tip of the barrel. He escaped the shot shell discharge, but was treated for powder burns on his hand.

Conservation officers were kept busy with 483 arrests for various violations stemming from improper outer clothing color to roadside shooting, hunting on private property without permission and failing to have the gun plugged to the legal three-shot limit.

One sidelight of the hunt was the oddity reported by a LaSalle County shooter who bagged a deer with only one antler but both male and female sex organs.

Oh deer!

Ask Andy

Silverfish really primitive insects

Andy sends a complete 20-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Glen Overton, age 10, of Milford, Conn., for his question:
WHAT EXACTLY AREE SILVERFISH?

His grayish body does not shine like silver, and certainly the whiskery little silverfish is not a fish. He is a land-dwelling insect, and his ancestors were scooting around in the days of the dinosaurs. In fact, according to theory, his remote ancestors were here on earth 400 million years ago.

Scientists classify him with the bristletails, shy little gray insects who do their best to keep out of sight. They are called primitive insects because none of them has wings and none of them goes through the miraculous change from caterpillar to butterfly. The average silverfish lives in the woods, and we never catch a glimpse of him.

However, sometimes silverfish take up residence in human homes — and get themselves rated as pests. They cannot abide the light of day or even a sudden flashlight. For this reason their homes are in dark crevices, perhaps in the walls or under the floors. They also like moist conditions, and their favorite hideaways are under the sink.

There the female silverfish lays her tiny eggs. The eggs hatch and become mini-copies of their parents. As they grow, their skins become too tight. Meantime, new skins grow underneath and when all is ready the old skins split apart. The growing silverfish step out and enjoy the comfort of their larger outfits — for a while. As they grow bigger, they shed several old skins for larger ones.

A silverfish is born hungry and continues to be hungry throughout his life. His favorite food is starchy stuff, such as cake crumbs and crusts of bread. He even makes a meal of the paste on the back of the wallpaper.

This sort of food is plentiful in the average kitchen. However, since the silverfish cannot abide light, his foraging is limited to the darkness of night — when the family has gone to bed. This is when he scuttles out from his secret hideaway and prowls around the kitchen. If you suspect that he is there, tiptoe quietly in the dark and suddenly switch on the light. And watch him scoot away home.

The adult silverfish is about an inch long, and his slim gray body is covered with dusty scales. Being an insect, he has six legs. There are long whiskery antennas on his hungry little head, and there are more spiky whiskers on his tail, Though he does not do a great deal of harm, he is rated as a household pest and naturally we want to rout him out of our walls and floors.

Andy sends a 7-volume set of C. S. Lewis' "Chronicles of Narnia" to Mary Kay Democke, age 8, of Struthers, Ohio, for her question:

HOW BIG IS A STAR?

At night, the stars in the sky look like little bright eyes. But actually, even a small one is enormous. They come in different sizes, but all of them are millions of miles away. As a rule, those that look bigger just happen to be the ones that are closest. This is because things that are farther away tend to look smaller. So we cannot tell much about their sizes just by looking at them.

Our sun is actually a star. It looks so much bigger than the others because it is much closer to us. Actually, it is a medium-size star. But it is more than a million times bigger than our great big world. A few stars are not much bigger than our earth. But there are giants and even supergiants. These whoppers are many times bigger than our medium-size sun. Some are big enough to gobble up most of our solar system.

'Consumer advocacy' in ABC special

NEW YORK (UPI) — Several years ago there was a proposal before New York's City Council to make markets put packaged meat in see-through plastic containers so customers could see the bottom as well as the top of their purchases.

A conservative councilman from Queens stood up to explain why he was voting for the measure, against his principles — his wife threatened mayhem if he didn't.

That's lobbying where it counts, consumer advocacy at its prime.

CONSUMER ADVOCACY is the subject of the ABC News Closeup titled, "The Consumer Offensive: Who Speaks for the People?", to be aired Saturday at 9 p.m.

The documentary, narrated by Peter Jennings, gives a quick history of the consumer movement, a look at "White Knight" Ralph Nader and some consumer groups around the country. Jennings talks to the head of the National Assn. of Manufacturers and a few others who oppose Nader and similar groups, and makes the valid point that increased product safety and durability may mean higher prices.

He sums up by talking about the need for industry to prove its "social responsibility by providing safe, reliable products reasonably priced," and consumer advocates to "give proper recognition to business' attempts at self reform." That's one of those statements which, while calculated to appease both sides, is more likely to irk them.

This on-the-one-hand, on-the-other-hand approach defines what is wrong with the closeup on consumerismn— it doesn't zero in on the subject and it doesn't explore what the future might hold.

Closeup does sum up what has been achieved — safer and better informed consumers, safer cars and children's toys, "food products that are not always healthier but at least we now know what's in the package."

Lindberg nixes high court; seeks comptroller post

State Comptroller George Lindberg, a Republican, has rescinded his decision to run for the Illinois Supreme Court and Friday said he will instead seek reelection to his present post.

At an afternoon press conference, where he was flanked by former Gov. Richard Ogilvie, State's Attorney General William Scott and Cook County GOP Chairman Louis Kasper, Lindberg said he changed his mind about seeking reelection after being urged to do so "by many of my friends in Illinois."

George Lindberg

Lindberg, 43, Crystal Lake, was elected the state's first comptroller in 1972. In recent months he has been embroiled in controversy with Gov. Daniel Walker and the Illinois General Assembly because of his contention that the state is headed toward bankruptcy.

LINDBERG OPPOSED legislative efforts to override Gov. Walker's school aid funding vetoes and has said the state will need a tax increase next year to remain solvent.

In announcing his candidacy for reelection, Lindberg said, "The decision was not an easy one, but I am now convinced that it is right and I look forward to the campaign."

He said the comptroller's office has been in "the forefront of efforts to keep open the veils of secrecy that historically confronted Illinoisans when they sought to find out how their government was spending their tax money."

Ogilvie and Scott both said they had urged Lindberg to run for reelection. Scott said Lindberg has helped his office in a "gigantic investigation" into Illinois public aid and in investigations in other areas of government mismanagement.

Lindberg said he chose to announce his decision Friday, before the Democratic party slatemakers announce that party's candidate for comptroller to avoid the appearance that he was reacting to the Democratic slate. "I'm going to do my damndest to beat every Democrat on the state ticket," he said.

The Democrats have a slate-making meeting scheduled Monday in Chicago and an announcement of the state slate is expected next week.

Serving on the panel, titled "Questions in Beginning a Police-Social Work Cooperation Team," besides Eppley will be Kenneth R. Scheel, Niles city manager, Judge F. J. Henninger of the DuPage Circuit Court and other officials.

Kerner to speak at conference

Otto Kerner, former governor, federal court judge and inmate of the federal prison system, will give the keynote address at the Conference on keynote address at the Conference on Criminal Justice Training and Education Dec. 16.

The conference, sponsored by the Cook County Criminal Justice Training and Leadership Development Section, will meet at the Chicago Hilton.

The one-day session will focus on ways to improve conditions in the criminal justice system and ways higher education institutions can be involved in the process.

Kerner served as a judge in the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals until he entered prison to serve a term on federal bribery and tax-evasion charges. Kerner was paroled earlier this year.

A Marine captain asks what he can do for his country...

...and skips his way 48,002 times to a new world record

Facing off with Guinness

The nylon rope, encased in blue and yellow plastic sleeves, clicked against the running board twice per second. U.S. Marine Corps Capt. Alan Jones, who one week earlier swam for 150 straight hours before reaching unconsciousness, was now skipping rope for almost five consecutive hours at the Chicago Health Club in Marina City.

This wasn't even a good workout. But it had been ballyhooed as a great human endurance feat and the 28-year-old officer condescended to advertising which lured in some folks to inspect him. There were:

Old women in heavy coats who, for some reason, came to see the antiseptic weight room with its chrome-plated discs, mirrors on three walls and a plush orange carpet which might also cover their living room floors,

The usual assortment of shapely young ladies who are attracted to places where the musclemen push their weights,

And the musclemen, plus some undermuscled skinny guys who perhaps long to belt a bully on the beach.

As he skipped, Jones agreed that many of them don't understand about the rope which twirled continuously over his head and beneath his feet. "It's sorta like you could say, 'This guy will be hanging himself in a few minutes. Then over here we have the weights.'"

Jones laughed at his own joke, then kept hopping from foot-to-foot until he had completed 48,002 skips in six hours and 12 minutes.

That effort will be submitted for possible note in the Guinness Book of World Records. Its current skipping record is no more than 32,809 by J. P. Hughes of Melbourne, Australia, on Oct. 26, 1953.

It is not Jones' manner to bask in glory. He explains that those 48,002 skips represent personal goals achieved, good advertising for the Marines and, "victory by forces of good over the forces of evil." He's serious, too. It's an American accomplishment, sort of like being first on the moon or inventing pizza.

He has been called "Superjock" by one national men's magazine. "Superpatriot" also would suffice. "There's a great quote from Teddy Roosevelt," Jones says. It sums up his personal goals, which include swimming the Mississippi and Congo rivers, skipping rope from Los Angeles to New York and completing 76,000 sit-ups in 76 hours . . . non-stop.

"Roosevelt said, 'Far greater it is to have done mighty things, to win glorious triumphs, even though checked by failure, than to take rank with those poor souls who live in the grey twilight that knows not victory nor defeat.'"

Jones cannot stop with the proverbs. "There's one by Robert Kennedy who said, 'The possible things are those that have been done. The impossible things are those that are waiting to be done.'

"Then, of course, there's John Kennedy's quotation, 'Ask not what your country . . .'; if I can inspire five people to physical fitness, then perhaps I'm helping out the country a little bit," Jones said.

There was some Capt. Alan Jones in everyone who passed through the Chicago Health Club's re-opened center at Marina City last week. From the bearded Chicago Ridge man who devoured 20 hot dogs in four minutes and four seconds to the Chicago man who failed in his peanut butter eating quest, they all came with glory in their eyes and courage in their hearts.

Here was a chance for real international fame — a spot in the Guinness Book of World Records.

It all came courtesy of the J. Walter Thompson Co., public relations agency for Chicago Health Clubs. It billed the week as a "Guinness Record Breaking Festival," ran newspaper ads looking for prospective record breakers, lined up some special guests and then hoped for success.

The clincher was that chance for any Chicago area resident to walk off the streets and break the record of his choice, or at least try. But there was no Guinness representative and it was merely a hopeful advertising gimmick aimed at drawing people into the Marina City club, preferably with checkbooks open.

As the Thompson people admitted, you could set a record and they could write a letter saying you ate 13 oxtails in five seconds while all your toes were crossed . . . or whatever . . . but that's no guarantee of being listed in the next edition.

To stimulate attendance, they advertised psychics Jeane Dixon and Irene Hughes; high wire aerialists Pepe and Irma Martina; fashion shows and Guinness Book record holder Henri LaMothe who belly flops 40 feet into 14 inches of water. There also would be a 4,000-pound ice cream sundae.

And, of course, U. S. Marine Capt. Alan Jones playing with his rope. It was not much challenge for a man who has run 199 miles in one stretch, commemorating the Marines' 199th birthday last year; swum 500 miles down the Snake and Columbia rivers, following a path taken by explorers Lewis and Clark to the Pacific Ocean; and completed 27,003 sit-ups in 28 hours.

The accomplishments Jones takes quite seriously. Himself, he doesn't. "Float like a butterfly, sting like a moth," Jones says of his brief fling at boxing. As he jumps between that rope, Jones discusses the finer art of river swimming. "The only time I ever swam upstream, I had this tremendous offer from a female salmon to go spawn."

His almost day-long workouts, which begin at 5:30 a.m., have been sandwiched into Jones' schedule as an Oregon-based recruitment officer for the Marines. He will soon be transferred to Virginia as a special physical fitness instructor. That is good. It will provide him even more training time. He jokes, "Captain America lives again!"

Sizing up the score

What every bowler regrets: a bad split

And the

by ART MUGALIAN

The strange thing about bowling alleys isn't the noise. It's the silence that insinuates itself into the constant, deafening roar of the pins.

Listen, just once, for the lull. It's an eerie sound.

Listen for the smooth hum of the ball as it hurtles toward its target like a deadly torpedo on its run to destruction.

My ball, however, is not a torpedo. Torpedoes don't bounce.

And I have found, like so many others of my generation, that the game of bowling has come full circle.

With a few drinks put away, I figured, this bowling league would be a cinch. But, the first time standing at the line, cradling an old, chipped 14-pound black ball, I felt the pressure.

Tension, nervousness, jitters — whatever you want to call it, the feeling overwhelmed me just then.

Strangers were watching me, or at least I thought they were watching. Their stares pierced me. They examined me, dissected my delivery, questioned my form. I knew that after I rolled my first ball they would recognize me for what I am: a real pushover, a bowling patsy.

The drinks hadn't helped. I was shaking almost uncontrollably, shivering in my size nine, two-tone, Beverly Lanes originals.

This bowling league business is serious stuff. It isn't like it used to be when we were kids and we spent all our money and all our Saturday afternoons at the bowling alley. Then it was fun, and if we lost — it was part of the fun. We just reached deep down into our pockets, made sure there was another 35 cents there, and bowled another line.

In this league, though, everything is organized. Everything is official and above board. There isn't room for "let me take that one over again." No second chances. It all goes into the record books, the bad with the good. The shame of failure is there for all to see in black and white.

And the glory, too, is there for the taking.

Bowling is probably the least athletic of all sports and the least complicated. It takes no special skills, there is no strategy to learn, no intricate defenses to master. Just get the ball down the alley and you're bowling.

Anybody can bowl — that's an important part of the game's popularity. Yet so few of us are any good at it.

One out of every four Americans has bowled in the last year. Millions of them belong to bowling leagues. But most of them don't know what they're doing.

There are spot bowlers and pin bowlers and bowlers who close their eyes. There are three-steppers, four-steppers, five steppers. Some bowlers never count their steps at all. Some bowlers move left and right and then left again.

Some bowlers never learn.

There is a certain element of beginner's luck in bowling that makes it almost impossible to improve. The beginner doesn't know the hazards of the game. He learns with time. He soon discovers that the ball can hook, especially when he doesn't want it to hook. He learns to make the ball back up, so to speak. He finds that he can make certain pins "kiss off" other pins.

When he learns "how to bowl," the bowler is in trouble. Once he discovers the subtleties of bowling — and every sport has subtleties — the bowler may as well forget it and start over.

The beginner approaches the game with unsuspecting innocence. He knows nothing of spin, rotation, finger placement, or follow-through. He is happy with the pin total he accumulates.

The pins are fickle. All 10 of them will fall at the slightest provocation from a five-year-old bowler rolling ar eight-pound ball. Yet a perfect pocket hit will fail to bring the same result a moment later.

Bowling is frustrating. It is supposed to be enjoyable — the term "social bowling" was invented for those of us whose average is below 150. More often than not, the bowling league is an excuse for a little drinking, a little merrymaking, a little wild talk.

But when your game is going bad — when your ball won't do what you want it to, when the pins won't drop — no amount of revelry is going to help. Your friends can slap you on the back and buy you a drink, but nothing is going to change that feeling: I blew it.

Everyone who ever bowled a 200 game knows the disgrace of a 117. And it usually comes on the same night. One minute a hero, the next minute a bum.

So what, then, is the attraction? Why do so many people belong to bowling leagues when the risk of embarrassment runs so high? Why do they invest good money in a ball keeps rolling along custom-drilled ball, expensive shoes, carrying case, and accessories?

Why am I doing this? What draws me to the bowling alley?

Bowling is a game and like all games it provides a form of competition. It gives us an opportunity to act out our urges and aggressions. It gives us a chance to be winners.

But bowling is different.

Every bowler who ever rolled a strike dreams of someday stringing 12 of them in a row. In no other sport is perfection so easily within grasp.

Yet, they almost ruined bowling when they made it respectable. When they brought it out of the dingy, shady underworld of saloons and pool halls into the bright lights and sanitized "lanes," they robbed bowling of its alter ego.

The promoters will tell you that cleaning up the sport led directly to its amazing popularity, and that's probably true. People bowl in three leagues a week who would never have seen the inside of a bowling "alley" 20 years ago.

Bowling wasn't so mechanized then. There were no automatic pinspotters, no subterranean ball returners, very few electric-eye foul lines. There were no marble-colored bowling balls.

It was a sport for men in those days. There was a lot of swearing and tobacco-chewing. The pinboys were maligned and mistreated. The bowling alley was not a place to take the family.

And the scoring was done by hand. Today, automation has taken over the role of official scorer in many houses. The strikes and spares appear instantaneously on an overhead toteboard. If the new system lessens the bowler's involvement in the game, at least is reduces the opportunity for careless mistakes in scoring. Give the bowler a chance to bowl, they say. Don't force him to haggle with the score.

But the scoring system in bowling has an almost magical quality that is vital to the bowler's enjoyment. There is a geometric progression to the way that strikes and spares add up in tens and twenties. There is a childlike delight in finally understanding it.

But bowling is a child's game, really. It isn't a sport, except on the professional level. It's just a game. They set up the pins and you try to knock them down. Then they set up the pins again.

It's a good thing they cleaned up bowling, probably. The game was meant for children, but for the longest time the children couldn't get near it. Now the adult leagues overrun the lanes as people attempt to find their childhood once again.

One of the freshest and most pleasant memories of early youth is a cavernous, beer-stinking bowling alley where my father used to take me on Wednesday nights. I don't remember much about the bowling itself. I do remember my father's friend chomping on a cigar, and I remember those old brown bottles of Blatz.

I remember the sights and smells and sounds. I remember enjoying it.

And I can still hear that humming sound as the ball echoed down the alley, an appointment to keep with the pins.

I can still hear it.

Getting ready for a strike

Key to the game is fun

by TOM VON MALDER

There are thousands of bowlers in the Northwest suburbs. On any given night you can find them at local lanes polishing balls, drying sweaty palms and gearing up for the perfect game.

Beverly Lanes, Arlington Heights, is only one of more than a dozen bowling alleys in the area and typically reports between 600 to 700 bowlers in 65 leagues a week.

Some bowlers do it for the exercise; others for the fun. Maxine Goodwin, an Arlington Heights resident, bowls in two woman's leagues each week and a league with her husband every other Sunday. She also acts as a substitute in two other leagues, which makes a total of five leagues in all.

"I love it" is her reaction to the sport. A definite sparkplug-type she roots for everybody.

"I'm not a good league bowler. I don't care what the other team does. I'm for each individual person," Mrs. Goodwin says. "I kind of have to watch myself from being so noisy."

Joan Dumelle, also of Arlington Heights, bowls with Mrs. Goodwin in the Beverlyettes league at the Beverly Lanes. She has bowled since she was 15 and her current league average is 152. One recent morning she just completed a 222 game that won her a glass from the management.

"I like the challenge and to try and keep improving," she says. "It's fun to be with the girls and it's a break once a week."

League play usually starts after Labor Day and runs for 35 weeks into May. In addition to money to cover the bowling time, each player puts something in the kitty towards prize money.

Most of the leagues are handicapped, which means each bowlers starts out with an equal advantage as the handicap covers the difference in bowler's averages. Winning or losing depends on the action in a specific game and how well each bowler does against his own average. If each bowler bowls his average, the game should be a tie.

The Guinness Festival began when Jeane Dixon attracted almost nobody. Pepe Martina strung his wire 60 feet above ground between the two Marina Towers and walked until contented; Irma got sick and didn't make curtain call. Irene Hughes played to a small crowd and Henri LaMothe, who is 72 years old, pulled up short with shoulder bursitis so his leap was cancelled.

"Oh well, at least I tried," said the big fellow. "I think hot dogs went down much better than grapes."

Nevertheless, the festival marched forward. Jim Murphy of Chicago Ridge walked in one night with a bagful of Oscar Mayer hot dogs. In four minutes and four seconds, the 20 hot dogs were gone, easily breaking the old record of 20 dogs eaten in 4:47. Murphy said thanks and left, probably for the bar where he works after spending the day in Commonwealth Edison's general accounting division.

Saturday morning produced few record attempts of merit. Then Murphy suddenly reappeared with a bag holding 64 grapes, the red variety with seeds. His goal was to eat them in 34.6 or fewer seconds, breaking the Guinness record for eating one pound of grapes.

But Murphy started poorly, changed from a standing to kneeling position midway through the attempt, and finished in 39 seconds. "Oh, well, at least I tried," said the big fellow. "I think hot dogs went down much better than grapes."

Jim Nankervis, a Maine East High School student from Des Plaines, snatched 48 pennies, exceeding the record 39 coins snatched by Chris Redford of England on Sept. 26, 1973.

Other attempts went in vain. Osasha Oyo-Mesi tried eating five pounds of peanut butter during the afternoon but failed without getting close. The two-man dart throwing team of Ed Sunden and Bob Herman tried a 10-hour game. But Sunden, who is not only fat but obnoxious, too, and clearly not in the health club spirit, couldn't last through his self-inflicted torture. The game ended after five hours, nine minutes, 45 seconds and 100,001 points.

And finally, there was Capt. Alan Jones who jumps rope. Usually he's quiet while jumping because talking throws off his breathing. But Jones wasn't in any rush to finish those 48,002 skips. So he talked about motivation. And why three years ago he decided to set physical endurance records which could remain forever untouched.

To help his country. "This is my mission in life," Jones says before starting to skip rope. "The overall goal is more significant records in a wider variety of endeavors than anyone else has ever reached. Each one is a building block to something else."

Most everything which Jones has accomplished thus far is conditioning. One month ago in Oregon, he skipped rope 200,000 times in 24 hours (with rest breaks) to raise charity money at one cent per skip.

The week before he came to Chicago, Jones endured his worst experience since his ultimate fitness project was accelerated three years ago. That was the 150-hour swim at the University of Oregon pool, another fund-raiser which gathered $5,000. Jones stopped for five minutes each hour so doctors could monitor his vital signs.

Osasha Oyo-Mesi tried eating five pounds of peanut butter but failed without getting close.

Jones' goal was a 168-hour swim. He began to hallucinate on the third day. "I believed I was captured by aliens who were attempting to prevent me from breaking the record. This whole thing seems incredible now," Jones said. "I was unable to separate reality from fantasy and became disoriented." During the 150th hour, Jones blacked out. He spent two days in intensive care.

One week later, Jones skipped rope in Chicago. Mentally, he still hadn't recovered from the swimming ordeal. "I'm having thoughts which are very confusing," he said. "When I finish this, I don't want to be carried away on a stretcher like I was before." No wonder his wife, Linda, will not watch any of his attempts.

Alan Jones is 5-foot-9. He weighs 139 pounds. When he was five years old, Jones had polio. When he was 17, Jones leaped over a parking meter and irreparably damaged vertebrae in his back. When he fought in Vietnam, he was shot while on a mission outside DaNang. All that happened before Jones quit eating meat, poultry and fish in protest to the great food waste by Americans.

As he stands there jumping rope, stopping every few thousand skips to put Vaseline on his feet, take mineral pills and drink orange juice, Alan Jones speaks of "becoming pure" physically and spiritually, resisting "earthly temptations" such as alcohol and sex . . . even being willing to sacrifice family and friends to reach a goal.

And what of those goals? Jones will spend Christmas with his family, then jump on a treadmill Dec. 28 in San Francisco. He'll run until he's unconscious as a battery of physicians check his vital signs each hour. Jones thinks he'll last six days.

Later in January, Jones will lie down and do 76,000 sit-ups to help raise money for Oregon high school athletes. He will lift weights non-stop for one week in February. And then on May 16, somewhere north of Minneapolis, Capt. Alan Jones of the U.S. Marine Corps will jump into the Mississippi River.

One month ago Jones skipped rope 200,000 times in 24 hours to raise money for charity.

Swimming faster than the two to three knot current, Jones will average between 40 and 50 miles per day. He'll swim in 12-hour sessions, resting for food and sleep. And when Jones finishes in New Orleans, on America's 200th birthday, he'll own the longest river swim ever recorded. Like his other pending marks, that also will be submitted for Guinness Book consideration.

But it won't last too long. Alan Jones is swimming Africa's marvelous Congo River in summer, 1977. As Jones says, "I want to keep going until I'm 100."

Sky Show opens at planetarium Dec. 2

"The Star of Bethlehem," traditional Christmas Sky Show at Chicago's Adler Planetarium, begins Tuesday.

The two-part Sky Show travels back in time to explore possible explanations for the star that led the Three Wise Men from Mesopotamia to Bethlehem. Astronomers speculate it could have been a star, comet, a meteor, eclipse or supernova, billion of times more luminous than the sun.

Special effects in the Kroc Universe Theater and Sky Theater will transport audiences from Christmas Eve in Chicago to the time of the three Wise Men. Sky shows are scheduled 2 p.m. Mondays through Fridays; 11 a.m., 1, 2, 3 and 4 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays; 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Fridays.

There will be a special holiday schedule Dec. 21 through Dec. 31 with sky shows at 11 a.m., 1, 2, 3 and 4 p.m. except for Tuesdays when the final sky show will be at 3 p.m.

Admission to the sky show is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children through Dec. 31. After that admission will be $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children. Children under 6 are not admitted.

For Sky Show information call 294-4624.

Miss Rose happy with single life

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jane Rose, who plays Cloris Leachman's middle-aged mother-in-law in the new "Phyllis" series, says, "Just because I am not married doesn't mean I haven't been asked."

And while Jane may not be pursued as avidly these days, she has no regrets about her decision to remain single.

She is a native of the state of Washington but has lived the past 30 years in New York City in a brownstone house in the east 60s. The 70-year-old house has been divided into six apartments, and Jane knows most of her neighbors well.

Her own quarters consist of two rooms, a small kitchen and bath. The ceilings and windows are high and the walls so thick city noises never penetrate her privacy.

Jane has furnished her dwelling with exquisite antiques, many from her childhood home in Washington. Her favorite piece is an ancient secretary given her by Geraldine Brooks. The apartment is filled with mementos from the many plays and television shows she's done over the years.

One striking example is a Venetian glass ash tray in the form of a seashell, a gift from Shirley Booth.

Jane's favorite companion for 18 years was a dog that inevitably drew attention when she walked him along the streets of Manhattan. Named Lancelot, he was half collie and half dachshund. The scrambled genes resulted in a giant, elongated dachshund with long hair.

The actress was bereft at his death seven years ago and vowed never to own another dog.

But five months after Lancelot's demise, Jane opened her door one night to find a forlorn mongrel loitering on the curb. Maternal instincts prevailed and she took the mutt in, dubbing him Rufus.

Rufus is considerably less striking in appearance than the departed Lancelot but just as beloved by his mistress.

Rufus came west with Jane when she began work in the new series this fall. Every morning before breakfast the actress takes him for a long walk.

She rents an apartment on a tree-lined street in the San Fernando Valley only a block away from CBS Studio Center. Her apartment looks out on rose gardens and flowering hibiscus and magnolia trees.

Her rented quarters are even smaller than her New York apartment, but Jane has added some homey touches in the form of paintings, a glass hummingbird and a startling paper dragon. The two-room apartment is filled with fresh flowers she gathers during the morning stroll.

JANE ROSE

Jane walks to work about 9 every morning. She returns home at noon to give Rufus a run and to fix herself a salad or sandwich. Once a week she joins other cast members for a noonday meal in a fancy restaurant.

Tuesdays, when "Phyllis" is taped for a live audience, Jane is at the studio for 12 straight hours. She smuggles Rufus past the guard at the gate so the dog won't be left alone all day.

She cares little for domestic chores and takes small pride in her cooking prowess, although her casserole dishes draw praise from guests.

One of her close friends is Jean Stapleton who helped Jane get settled when she arrived from New York earlier this year. The two have been pals for more than 20 years.

Jane prefers to wear dresses and suits. Casual California fashions are not to her liking.

She brought dozens of books along with her, but so far hasn't had time to read them. In the evenings after going over her script, Jane enjoys watching other situation comedy shows, especially "All In the Family."

The three major networks could be in for a $100 million loss if the drop in total primetime viewing continues for the rest of the season. For the six-week period from September 8 through October 19, the number of homes viewing primetime TV was down about six per cent. Since advertising time is purchased on the basis of the number of people watching the programs, the decrease in viewing means a corresponding decrease in advertising rates.

Shelby Lyman on chess

Have you heard the following story about Emanuel Lasker?

It seems that the indomitable world champion was enjoying an ocean voyage when he was challenged to a chess game by a stranger, who didn't recognize the incognito Lasker.

"I must warn you," the champion was told, "I am a very strong player, probably able to spot you my queen and still win." Lasker, who rarely flinched from a challenge, played at queen odds and contrived to lose.

Barely had his opponent a moment to enjoy his victory, when Lasker offered the following observation: "I believe it was an advantage for you to have played without your queen. Your king, as a result, had an extra escape square, and, therefore, was impossible to checkmate. Let us reverse the odds."

Flabbergasted, the man accepted the new terms . . . and quickly lost.

Hint and explanation for Diagram 1: This exercise will improve your ability to visualize checkmate. White will construct a "box" for himself and draw the lid . . . surprisingly quickly.

It used to be necessary to emphasize that chess was not a game only for graybeards. But in this day of youth worship, we must plug for the elder generation by drawing the spotlight to Soviet grandmaster Ewfim Geller.

This 50-year-old, Spassky's second in Reykjavik, is the supreme hero of the moment. Since Sept. 1, he has won two of the strongest tournaments in years — the Alexander Memorial at Teeside, England and the Alexander Memorial in Moscow.

In these efforts, Geller finished ahead of four ex-World Champions (Smyslov, Tal, Petrosian and Spassky) and four or five others of world class calibre.

The following cameo game, against Stean of England, gives us a taste of Geller's rich style. A sound opening and witty tactics rebuff an opponent who tried too hard.

In Diagram 2, we see Stean's ultimate dilemma. Geller has just placed him in an embarrassing pin with a capture at Q5 with his queen.

Stean saved rook and queen with 1 . . . R-R5, but resigned after 2. B-N5 check, K-B1; and the quietly elegant 3. R-B1! He was in a deadly mating net.

SOLVE-IT

BLACK

White plays. Self-mate in two

After 16. Q×N

(Diagram 2)

BLACK

WHITE

An artful finish

Geller (White)	Stean (Black)
1. N-KB3	P-QB4
2. P-K4	P-KN3
3. P-Q4	PxP
4. NxP	N-QB3
5. P-QB4	N-B3
6. N-QB3	P-Q3
7. B-K2	NxN
8. QxN	B-N2
9. B-N5	B-K3
10. R-QB1	Q-R4
11. Q-Q2	R-QB1
12. P-B3	BxP
13. N-Q5	QxP
14. O-O	NxN
15. RxB	RxR
16. QxN	R-R5
17. B-N5 check	K-B1
18. R-B1	RESIGNS

Answer to Solve-It: White's first move is 1. P-B4. After black's 1. . . . P-B4 check in return, and 2. K-K5 . . ., black's 2. . . . N-B6 gives checkmate!

Polish poster exhibit now open at museum

An exhibit of contemporary Polish posters is now open at the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago.

The exhibit, organized and presented by the Polish government, will be open through Feb. 7. The 50 posters in the exhibit show the development of art form in Poland since its beginnings in the 19th century. They announce films, sports events and circuses and also promote trade fairs, plays and concerts.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Some bridge hands are so simple that the correct bidding and play stand out. Yet bridge players go wrong for one reason or another.

South has a normal notrump opening bid and North a normal raise to game. There is no reason to waste time with his diamond suit. He has no singleton and should try for the nine trick game.

West leads the six of spades. East produces the king and it is up to South to let that king hold the trick. South is giving up a potential trick with the jack of spades but he has no need of that trick.

What he has need of are four tricks in the diamond suit. He may collect five, but he doesn't need them. Four diamonds plus one spade, two hearts and two clubs make a total of nine and South has bid to take nine.

South ducks the king of spades, plays his jack when the spade is led back and takes his ace when the third spade is led. Then he leads the queen of diamonds and lets it ride. East takes his king and can't lead a spade so South scores game and rubber.

Stevens high court choice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Friday nominated U.S. Appeals Judge John Paul Stevens of Chicago to succeed retired Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, calling Stevens the "best qualified" of all the men and women boosted for the job.

Ford offered no clues as to whether the 55-year-old Stevens — unknown to most of the nation — might be expected to strengthen the conservative or the dwindling liberal wing of the court, nor any indication what his judicial views or political allegiance might be.

But professional lawyers who know the gray-haired, soft-spoken Stevens described him, in the words of one, as "a man you can't really type as a liberal or a conservative, a very pragmatic thinker" — and they unanimously expressed professional enthusiasm at the choice.

IN A SURPRISE action scheduled only hours in advance, Ford appeared before White House reporters on the eve of his departure for China and announced he had concluded a two-week search for "the person I believe to be best qualified to serve as an associate justice of the Supreme Court."

It was Stevens, a member of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago since 1970 and a brilliant lawyer who had the enthusiastic support of both the American Bar Assn. and Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi.

Ford's announcement ended speculation he might nominate the first woman Supreme Court Justice as his wife and many feminists urged him to do — or choose some well known, but possibly controversial, candidate such as Solicitor Gen. Robert Bork.

"Judge Stevens is held in the highest esteem by his colleagues in the legal profession and the judiciary and has had an outstanding career in the practice and teaching of law as well as on the federal bench," Ford said in his nationally broadcast announcement.

"I am confident that he will bring both professional and personal qualities of the highest order to the Supreme Court."

IN CHICAGO, Stevens told reporters he would "do everything in my power to render the best possible judicial service of which I am capable. . .

"If the Senate finds my qualifications acceptable I will begin the new assignment as expeditiously as possible and will do my utmost to discharge the responsibilities of the new office in a manner consistent with the finest traditions of a great institution."

Douglas, the man he would succeed, declined comment on the nomination.

Ford, who had submitted a list of at least 15 potential nominees to the ABA for its recommendations, said he had "conducted a thorough search and considered an extensive list of distinguished men and women to fill" the vacancy left by Douglas — a vacancy that reduced the liberal wing of Chief Justice Warren Burger's court to two members: Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall.

JUAN ALDAPE is led into Niles court Friday after his arrest in the shooting death of an ex-girlfriend Pamela Keeley, 17, 1606 Algonquin Rd., Mount Prospect. Aldape, 19, of Mount Prospect is being held on charges of murder, aggravated kidnapping and burglary.

Mt. Prospect girl murdered

by JOHN MAES

A Mount Prospect man has been charged with the kidnaping and murder of his 17 year old ex-girlfriend while her parents slept.

The body of Pamela Keeley, 1606 Algonquin Rd., clad only in underpants and a white T-shirt, was dumped along a roadside at Belmont Avenue and Noyes Street near Arlington Heights early Friday. She was shot five times in the head and chest.

Her father Jack Keeley said, "My wife and I were sound asleep through the whole thing." They were notified of the killing by police.

IN CUSTODY IS Juan Aldape, 19, of 549 Dempster St., an employe at Universal Oil Products Co., Des Plaines. He has been charged with murder, aggravated kidnaping and burglary, said Lt. Frank Braun of the Sheriff's Police.

The girl was a senior at Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, where the two had met, and had planned to become a stewardess with United Airlines following graduation, her father said. "She said it was something she'd like to do," he said.

Braun said Aldape allegedly shot the girl outside a gas station about a block away from where the body was found. Police were uncertain of the time of the shooting.

The girl was taken to Northwest Community Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

Pam Keeley

Police from Arlington Heights arrived on the scene about 6:45 a.m. after receiving two calls, one from a motorist who saw the body and reported it as an injury accident.

BRAUN SAID AFTER the shooting, Aldape reported the incident to Northwest Central Dispatch Center, a police radio communications system covering Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village and Buffalo Grove departments.

Braun said Aldape was later arrested at his apartment without struggle and the alleged murder weapon, a 22-cal. pistol, was confiscated.

Aldape and the girl had been dating and broke up a few weeks ago, Braun said.

Police say Aldape broke into the apartment by smashing the glass in a kitchen door. The elder Keeley said the family returned from a Thanksgiving get-together about 2:30 a.m.

The parents notified Mount Prospect police about 8:30 a.m. after they woke up and discovered the break-in and their daughter missing, Braun said.

Aldape was arraigned Friday afternoon before Associate Judge Albert H. LaPlante in the Niles branch of circuit Court. The suspect was ordered taken to County jail without bound pending a Dec. 2 court date in Niles.

Keeley also said his daughter had begun working part time at Sambo's Restaurant, Mount Prospect, about a week ago.

Christians, Jews begin holiday seasons

Saturday

by KAREN BLECHA

Repent and rejoice. These are the two words that symbolize Advent, the church season that begins Sunday.

At Roman Catholic and Protestant churches throughout the area, families will light the first candle on the Advent wreath to welcome the season that prepares for Christmas and the coming of Christ.

Advent is a season that has changed at many churches over the years. Years ago it was a season of penance; today it is also a season for rejoicing.

"In past history the color purple used during Advent was a sign of penance," said the Rev. James Flosi, of St. Hubert's Catholic Church in Hoffman Estates.

"TODAY IT is more of a joyful celebration — a waiting for the coming of Christ," he said.

The season of Advent is second only to Easter in importance in most churches. The term "advent" is of secular origin, referring to the official reception of royalty.

In the Roman Catholic Church, Advent is a time of preparation for Christmas and a season of looking forward to Christ's second coming at the end of time. The first part of the season focuses on the glorious return of the Lord while the second part accents the Lord's birth.

The symbols of the season are the Advent wreath, which symbolizes the unending God, and the Jesse tree. The Advent wreath has four candles, each one representing one of the four Sundays before Christmas. Each Sunday one of the candles is lit.

At the Church of the Incarnation United Methodist, Arlington Heights, the candles have added significance, said the Rev. Larry Hilkemann. The candles symbolize the Wise Men, Shepherds, Mary and Joseph who obeyed the Lord and the birth of Christ.

"WE ALSO have a Jesse tree which is a reminder of the Old Testament and that God said Jesus would be coming," Hilkemann said. At Church of the In-

Hanukkah: Festival of Lights

by JILL BETTNER

The Hanukkah candles the Milton Jacobs family will light this weekend in their Hoffman Estates home symbolize a personal commitment to preserving the special meaning of the beautiful eight-day Festival of Lights.

They believe without this kind of dedication, the significance of Hanukkah could be lost and the customs subtly "Christianized" in the Northwest suburbs.

Today, Jews are outnumbered nearly four-to-one in the Northwest suburbs, creating some problems for families like the Jacobs who want their two young daughters, Bonni, 7, and Cheryl, 5, to understand and appreciate the uniqueness of their own religion and heritage.

HANUKKAH IS PROBABLY the toughest time to protect Jewish individuality, she said, especially for children. For a while, Bonni and Cheryl attended public schools. Concerned that the girls might feel left out of things with the general preoccupation with Christmas, Mrs. Jacobs would request time to speak to their classes about Hanukkah.

Her husband agreed, saying, "Christmas puts a lot of pressure on Jewish children. Hanukkah is important, but it isn't a holiday that should be equated to Christmas in importance. But because the two happen about the same time, it is."

Bonni and Cheryl now attend Woodfield Jewish Day School, Hoffman Estates, where children begin learning Hebrew and Jewish history in kindergarten.

Bonni knows all about Hanukkah, which, she explained, "reminds us of all the things that happened in the story of the Maccabees."

THE MACCABEES were a group of guerrillas who literally saved the Jewish religion from being wiped out by the Syrians in 165 B.C. Syrian King Antiochus decreed that year that the only temple of worship for Jews in Palestine was to be destroyed. The temple was taken over, idols placed inside and a pig sacrificed on the altar, desecrating the House of God.

Refusing to accept religious genocide, the Mac-

THEY CAME BY THE thousands to shop the post-Thanksgiving bargains Friday at shopping centers throughout the area. Weary shoppers take a break at Woodfield Shopping Center, a scene that was repeated in most stores, as record-breaking crowds defied inflation to buy, buy buy.

Merchants delighted: 'recession over'

Christmas shoppers pack Northwest stores

A Herald staff report

Record crowds of shoppers streamed into Northwest suburban stores Friday to begin their holiday shopping, kicking off what is expected to be the highest-volume sales season ever.

At Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg, where crows of almost 125,000 packed the mall the day after Thanksgiving last year, officials estimated 20 per cent more shoppers this year

Merchants throughout the area believe the recession has ended, shoppers are more confident about money and Christmas sales will break all previous records.

AT WOODFIELD, lockers for coats and packages were full by 10 a.m., parking spaces were at a premium by 11, and by noon, lines streamed outside restaurants and rest rooms.

The red and purple steps in the center of the mall were covered with shoppers seeking a rest from heavy shopping bags and shoulder-to-shoulder traffic.

Still, not many shoppers seemed to mind the crowds.

"I like to go shopping when it's like this," one teenager was overheard saying to her friend. "Salespeople don't bug you when it's this crowded."

David Silger, merchandising manager at Sears at Woodfield, said the day after Thanksgiving is so busy because there are several things happening simultaneously that do not usually occur at the same time.

BESIDES THE traditional desire to start Christmas shopping after Thanksgiving, Silger said, many firms are closed, enabling more people to go shopping, with husbands home, more wives could leave their children home and shop in peace; days when schools are closed are busy because high school students come to the malls and mothers bring young children in for clothes; and banks paid out Christmas Club money last week.

"In departments where people traditionally do their Christmas shopping, like jewelry and cosmetics, we may have as many as 50 per cent additional salespeople," Silger said.

"We're geared for this type of traffic all the time because we pack this store every Saturday and Sunday," he said. "This is just more continuous. It starts heavy and it ends heavy."

Department stores have increased their security staffs in preparation for the expected heavy Christmas crowd and its accompanying shoplifters, and the Schaumburg Police Dept. will join with the regular Woodfield security police patroling both inside and outside the mall.

SALES EXPECTATIONS in general are high. Merchants said business was not too bad last year during the recession, so they are expecting very good sales this year.

Mike Silverman, president of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, said, "All merchants who are trying to get business should succeed. If you're aggressive and have a good product or service, there are enough people in this area that there's no reason for business to be bad."

Phyllis Peszek of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Assn., said merchants there are expecting a good season. Helen DeWitt, public relations director for the Hawthorn Shopping Center in Libertyville, said she expects sales to be up over last year since more than 100 stores in the 3-year-old mall are now open.

Carol Pisasras, a saleswoman at Teddy's a women's fashions store, said the warm November weather cut into expected sales.

"Who needs winter clothing when it's 70 degrees outside," she said. "Now that there is some snow on the ground, people are more in the Christmas-buying spirit."

CHUCK SACCARO, owner of the Craft Shop at Randhurst, said sales last month were "incredible."

"Most of the people who shop here make their own Christmas gifts," he explained. "They buy what they need in November to give them time to make things."

Silger said many items in Sears are selling so fast that it is difficult to fill orders.

"There is a lot more investment in family entertainment gifts," Silger said "Our hottst item is "Pong," a $99 ping pong game which attaches to a TV set. We can't get enough of them. A type of pinball machine called Pachinko is selling fast at $50. People seem to realize they should be spending more time with their families. Instead of watching TV all night, they're attaching a Pong machine to the set and playing Pong."

Silger said other fast-selling items are mood rings, blow dryers, electronic watches for men and women, curling irons, leisure suits and anything made out of prewashed denim.

"PEOPLE ARE BUYING higher-quality items with longer lasting features— top of the line appliances, better quality clothing," he said. "Inflation is high, the dollar is hard to earn, and people are tired of getting little use out of something they paid good money for."

On what is traditionally described by merchants as the busiest day of the year, crowds in this area were a mixture of dedicated shoppers, impatient husbands, kids eyeing Santa and some looking for something to do.

"I'm waiting, my son's sleeping in this stroller, and my wife's shopping," said a Morton Grove man perched on a ledge in front of J.C. Penney's. "We're definitely buying today. We want to get as much shopping done as possible."

57 accidents recorded between 1973, August

City cop calls Mannheim S-curve 'treacherous'

A Des Plaines police official has called the Mannheim Rd. S-curve "treacherous," but said there is little the city can do because it is a state-maintained road.

Lt. Mike Clark said police records show there were 51 property damage and six personal injury accidents at the curve between 1973 and last August. There have been no fatalities.

The Herald requested the statistics after residents in the area asked the city to lower the speed limit, on Mannheim, U.S. Rte. 45, to 25 m.p.h. south of the curve. The residents said the 35 m.p.h. speed limit between Prospect Avenue and Bittersweet Road is the primary cause of many accidents on the curve.

CLARK SAID that although the speed limit on the S-curve is 25 m.p.h., cars often do not slow down to that speed before going into the curve.

"Just by looking at the diagrams of these accidents you can see that most are caused by speed," he said. "Very often people who are not familiar with the curve go into it too fast.

"At least once a year we have to go down there and pull a car out of someone's living room," he said. "As far as I'm concerned 25 to 30 m.p.h. is the only sane speed at which to take that curve."

Clark said, however, that despite the accidents, there is little the city can do about the problem

"THE PROBLEM is with the state," he said. "They have some pretty strict requirements on speed limits and there's nothing the city can do"

He said police have difficulty enforcing speed limits near the S-curve because it is unsafe to have police cars parked on Mannheim Road.

Many of the accidents on the S-curve could be eliminated, Clark believes, if the speed limit on Mannheim Road between Touhy and Prospect avenues is lowered from 45 to 35 or 40 m.p.h.

Slowing down the cars further down the road would be much better, he said. "If they are slowed down gradually they would go into the S-curve at the proper speed"

BESIDES SPEED, Clark said many of the accidents on the curve are caused because of the narrowness of the Street at that location.

"The road is just too narrow for the volume of traffic it has," he said. "It's a four-lane road, but when you get two cars side by side on either side of the street it's awfully tight and there's no room for air"

The residents' request for the lower speed limit has been referred to the city council's streets and traffic committee for study. Although the city cannot change the speed limit, city officials can make recommendations to the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

Before any speed reductions are made, state officials would have to conduct extensive speed surveys along Mannheim Road.

Marie Vesper, 1730 Mannheim Rd, said recently that residents have not contacted the state about lowering the speed limit

"We'll wait and see whether or not the city does anything about it," she said. "If they don't, we might try something else."

by KAREN BLECHA

Repent and rejoice. These are the two words that symbolize Advent, the church season that begins Sunday.

At Roman Catholic and Protestant churches throughout the area, families will light the first candle on the Advent wreath to welcome the season that prepares for Christmas and the coming of Christ.

Advent is a season that has changed at many churches over the years. Years ago it was a season of penance; today it is also a season for rejoicing.

"In past history the color purple used during Advent was a sign of penance," said the Rev. James Flosi, of St. Hubert's Catholic Church in Hoffman Estates.

"TODAY IT is more of a joyful celebration — a waiting for the coming of Christ," he said.

The season of Advent is second only to Easter in importance in most churches. The term "advent" is of secular origin, referring to the official reception of royalty.

In the Roman Catholic Church, Advent is a time of preparation for Christmas and a season of looking forward to Christ's second coming at the end of time. The first part of the season focuses on the glorious return of the Lord while the second part accents the Lord's birth.

The symbols of the season are the Advent wreath, which symbolizes the unending God, and the Jesse tree. The Advent wreath has four candles, each one representing one of the four Sundays before Christmas. Each Sunday one of the candles is lit.

At the Church of the Incarnation United Methodist, Arlington Heights, the candles have added significance, said the Rev. Larry Hilkemann. The candles symbolize the Wise Men, Shepherds, Mary and Joseph who obeyed the Lord and the birth of Christ.

"WE ALSO have a Jesse tree which is a reminder of the Old Testament and that God said Jesus would be coming," Hilkemann said. At Church of the In-

Hanukkah: Festival of Lights

by JILL BETTNER

The Hanukkah candles the Milton Jacobs family will light this weekend in their Hoffman Estates home symbolize a personal commitment to preserving the special meaning of the beautiful eight-day Festival of Lights.

They believe without this kind of dedication, the significance of Hanukkah could be lost and the customs subtly "Christianized" in the Northwest suburbs.

Today, Jews are outnumbered nearly four-to-one in the Northwest suburbs, creating some problems for families like the Jacobs who want their two young daughters, Bonni, 7, and Cheryl, 5, to understand and appreciate the uniqueness of their own religion and heritage.

HANUKKAH IS PROBABLY the toughest time to protect Jewish individuality, she said, especially for children. For a while, Bonni and Cheryl attended public schools. Concerned that the girls might feel left out of things with the general preoccupation with Christmas, Mrs. Jacobs would request time to speak to their classes about Hanukkah.

Her husband agreed, saying, "Christmas puts a lot of pressure on Jewish children. Hanukkah is important, but it isn't a holiday that should be equated to Christmas in importance. But because the two happen about the same time, it is."

Bonni and Cheryl now attend Woodfield Jewish Day School, Hoffman Estates, where children begin learning Hebrew and Jewish history in kindergarten.

Bonni knows all about Hanukkah, which, she explained, "reminds us of all the things that happened in the story of the Maccabees."

THE MACCABEES were a group of guerrillas who literally saved the Jewish religion from being wiped out by the Syrians in 165 B.C. Syrian King Antiochus decreed that year that the only temple of worship for Jews in Palestine was to be destroyed. The temple was taken over, idols placed inside and a pig sacrificed on the altar, desecrating the House of God.

Aldape and the girl had been dating and broke up a few weeks ago, Braun said.

Police say Aldape broke into the apartment by smashing the glass in a kitchen door. The elder Keeley said the family returned from a Thanksgiving get-together about 2:30 a.m.

The parents notified Mount Prospect police about 8:30 a.m. after they woke up and discovered the break-in and their daughter missing, Braun said.

Aldape was arraigned Friday afternoon before Associate Judge Albert H. LaPlante in the Niles branch of circuit Court. The suspect was ordered taken to County jail without bound pending a Dec. 2 court date in Niles.

Keeley also said his daughter had begun working part time at Sambo's Restaurant, Mount Prospect, about a week ago.

advice of his attorney.

"I was told that if I'm applying for a license, I need an account (for service) in the village," he said.

The judiciary and purchasing committee interviewed the representatives of five scavenger firms Wednesday night to make recommendations on whether to issue a fourth village scavenger license. Village trustees are reviewing the current ordinance which provides for four licenses. Three of the licenses have already been issued to the Wheeling Disposal Co., Buffalo Grove Disposal Co. and Arc Disposal Co.

Scavenger companies applying for the fourth license include Garden City Disposal Co.; Best Scavenger Service; Browning-Ferris Industries, Barrington; Hoffman Scavenger Services, Morton Grove; and Top Disposal Service, Berwyn.

Vos urged the committee members not limit the number of scavenger licenses issued by the village.

"I feel as long as we meet the same requirements as far as financial responsibility and insurance, you should let us operate. You've got enough controls on us. I feel there should be free enterprise — that's the way America was built," he said.

Otis Hedlund, committee chairman, said he will continue to recommend that the number of scavenger licenses issued by the village be reduced to three. He said the board should make a decision on the ordinance at its Monday night meeting at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Academy bid deadline set

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, has set Dec. 19 as the deadline for accepting requests for nomination to attend service academies.

He said residents can seek appointment to the U.S. Air Force Academy, Naval or Merchant Marine academies. There are no appointments this year to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Mikva added.

Further information about making application can be obtained by calling Walter Narhan at 353-7942.

Merchants delighted: 'recession over'

Christmas shoppers pack Northwest stores

A Herald staff report

Record crowds of shoppers streamed into Northwest suburban stores Friday to begin their holiday shopping, kicking off what is expected to be the highest-volume sales season ever.

At Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg, where crows of almost 125,000 packed the mall the day after Thanksgiving last year, officials estimated 20 per cent more shoppers this year.

Merchants throughout the area believe the recession has ended, shoppers are more confident about money and Christmas sales will break all previous records.

AT WOODFIELD, lockers for coats and packages were full by 10 a.m., parking spaces were at a premium by 11, and by noon, lines streamed outside restaurants and rest rooms.

The red and purple steps in the center of the mall were covered with shoppers seeking a rest from heavy shopping bags and shoulder-to-shoulder traffic.

Still, not many shoppers seemed to mind the crowds.

"I like to go shopping when it's like this," one teenager was overheard saying to her friend. "Salespeople don't bug you when it's this crowded."

David Silger, merchandising manager at Sears at Woodfield, said the day after Thanksgiving is so busy because there are several things happening simultaneously that do not usually occur at the same time.

BESIDES THE traditional desire to start Christmas shopping after Thanksgiving, Silger said, many firms are closed, enabling more people to go shopping; with husbands home, more wives could leave their children home and shop in peace; days when schools are closed are busy because high school students come to the malls and mothers bring young children in for clothes; and banks paid out Christmas Club money last week.

"In departments where people traditionally do their Christmas shopping, like jewelry and cosmetics, we may have as many as 50 per cent additional salespeople," Silger said.

"We're geared for this type of traffic all the time because we pack this store every Saturday and Sunday," he said. "This is just more continuous. It starts heavy and it ends heavy."

Department stores have increased their security staffs in preparation for the expected heavy Christmas crowd and its accompanying shoplifters, and the Schaumburg Police Dept. will join with the regular Woodfield security police patroling both inside and outside the mall.

SALES EXPECTATIONS in general are high. Merchants said business was not too bad last year during the recession, so they are expecting very good sales this year.

Mike Silverman, president of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, said, "All merchants who are trying to get business should succeed. If you're aggressive and have a good product or service, there are enough people in this area that there's no reason for business to be bad."

Phyllis Peszek of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Assn., said merchants there are expecting a good season. Helen DeWitt, public relations director for the Hawthorn Shopping Center in Libertyville, said she expects sales to be up over last year since more than 100 stores in the 3-year-old mall are now open.

Carol Pisasras, a saleswoman at Teddy's a women's fashions store, said the warm November weather cut into expected sales.

"Who needs winter clothing when it's 70 degrees outside," she said. "Now that there is some snow on the ground, people are more in the Christmas-buying spirit."

CHUCK SACCARO, owner of the Craft Shop at Randhurst, said sales last month were "incredible."

"Most of the people who shop here make their own Christmas gifts," he explained. "They buy what they need in November to give them time to make things."

Silger said many items in Sears are selling so fast that it is difficult to fill orders.

"There is a lot more investment in family entertainment gifts," Silger said "Our hottest item is "Pong," a $99 ping pong game which attaches to a TV set. We can't get enough of them. A type of pinball machine called Pachinko is selling fast at $50. People seem to realize they should be spending more time with their families Instead of watching TV all night, they're attaching a Pong machine to the set and playing Pong."

Silger said other fast-selling items are mood rings, blow dryers, electronic watches for men and women, curling irons, leisure suits and anything made out of prewashed denim.

"PEOPLE ARE BUYING higher-quality items with longer lasting features— top of the line appliances, better quality clothing," he said. "Inflation is high, the dollar is hard to earn, and people are tired of getting little use out of something they paid good money for."

On what is traditionally described by merchants as the busiest day of the year, crowds in this area were a mixture of dedicated shoppers, impatient husbands, kids eyeing Santa and some looking for something to do.

"I'm waiting, my son's sleeping in this stroller, and my wife's shopping," said a Morton Grove man perched on a ledge in front of J.C. Penney's. "We're definitely buying today. We want to get as much shopping done as possible."

At Randhurst, where the scene was much the same, Robert Moylan said he was there because of "my wife. Otherwise I wouldn't be here." He does not like shopping and does not usually indulge in it, and the worst part is the "waiting," he said, as he waited for his wife

Jean Petzold of Niles said only one thing could bring her and her two sons to Randhurst the day after Thinksgiving "Old St Nick You can't do any shopping when you've got two little kids with you."

R. Bischoffer of Arlington Heights was done with her shopping, but said she came to Randhurst so her grandson could see Santa Claus. Marion Madison of Deerfield only had odds and ends to finish up and said she was there primarily for "a day of enjoyment."

Explorer students' trip

Explorer Law Post students, sponsored by the Kemper Insurance Companies, Long Grove, recently took their first field trip which included a visit with Judge Abraham Marovitz of Cook County Circuit Court.

Marovitz talked with students in his chambers and answered their questions about the legal profession. The judge also showed his collection of Lincoln memorabilia.

Students also met with Sen. Charles Percy's executive assistant, Jerry McMahon.

Other stops on the trip included a visit to the Sears Tower Skydeck and the Chicago Title & Trust Co.

Jacobs back on plan unit

Rodney L. Jacobs, 520 Springside Ln., Buffalo Grove, recently was reappointed to the plan commission by the village board.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Friday nominated U.S. Appeals Judge John Paul Stevens of Chicago to succeed retired Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, calling Stevens the "best qualified" of all the men and women boosted for the job.

Ford offered no clues as to whether the 55-year-old Stevens — unknown to most of the nation — might be expected to strengthen the conservative or the dwindling liberal wing of the court, nor any indication what his judicial views or political allegiance might be.

But professional lawyers who know the gray-haired, soft-spoken Stevens described him, in the words of one, as "a man you can't really type as a liberal or a conservative, a very pragmatic thinker" — and they unanimously expressed professional enthusiasm at the choice.

IN A SURPRISE action scheduled only hours in advance, Ford appeared before White House reporters on the eve of his departure for China and announced he had concluded a two-week search for "the person I believe to be best qualified to serve as an associate justice of the Supreme Court."

It was Stevens, a member of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago since 1970 and a brilliant lawyer who had the enthusiastic support of both the American Bar Assn. and Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi.

Ford's announcement ended speculation he might nominate the first woman Supreme Court Justice as his wife and many feminists urged him to do — or choose some well known, but possibly controversial, candidate such as Solicitor Gen. Robert Bork.

"Judge Stevens is held in the highest esteem by his colleagues in the legal profession and the judiciary and has had an outstanding career in the practice and teaching of law as well as on the federal bench," Ford said in his nationally broadcast announcement.

"I am confident that he will bring both professional and personal qualities of the highest order to the Supreme Court."

IN CHICAGO, Stevens told reporters he would "do everything in my power to render the best possible judicial service of which I am capable. . .

"If the Senate finds my qualifications acceptable I will begin the new assignment as expeditiously as possible and will do my utmost to discharge the responsibilities of the new office in a manner consistent with the finest traditions of a great institution."

Douglas, the man he would succeed, declined comment on the nomination.

Ford, who had submitted a list of at least 15 potential nominees to the ABA for its recommendations, said he had "conducted a thorough search and considered an extensive list of distinguished men and women to fill" the vacancy left by Douglas — a vacancy that reduced the liberal wing of Chief Justice Warren Burger's court to two members Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall.

In Friday kidnap-murder

Girl, 17, shot to death; police charge ex-beau

by JOHN MAES

A Mount Prospect man has been charged with the kidnaping and murder of his 17-year-old ex-girlfriend while her parents slept.

The body of Pamela Keeley, 1606 Algonquin Rd., clad only in underpants and a white T-shirt, was dumped along a roadside at Belmont Avenue and Noyes Street near Arlington Heights early Friday. She was shot five times in the head and chest.

Her father Jack Keeley said, "My wife and I were sound asleep through the whole thing." They were notified of the killing by police.

IN CUSTODY IS Juan Aldape, 19, of 549 Dempster St., an employe at Universal Oil Products Co., Des Plaines. He has been charged with murder, aggravated kidnaping and burglary, said Lt. Frank Braun of the Sheriff's Police.

The girl was a senior at Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, where the two had met, and had planned to become a stewardess with United Airlines following graduation, her father said. "She said it was something she'd like to do," he said.

Pam Keeley

Braun said Aldape allegedly shot the girl outside a gas station about a block away from where the body was found. Police were uncertain of the time of the shooting.

The girl was taken to Northwest Community Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

Police from Arlington Heights arrived on the scene about 6:45 a.m. after receiving two calls, one from a motorist who saw the body and reported it as an injury accident.

BRAUN SAID AFTER the shooting, Aldape reported the incident to Northwest Central Dispatch Center, a police radio communications system covering Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village and Buffalo Grove departments.

Braun said Aldape was later arrested at his apartment without struggle and the alleged murder

by TIM MORAN

Salary increases averaging $300 per employe were included in a $40 million budget approved by the Lake County Board Friday.

At the same time, the board approved a tax increase of 4.7 cents per $100 of assessed valuation which will bring the county tax levy to 61.5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, or about $61.50 in county taxes on a house assessed at $10,000.

The salary approval reversed Tuesday's board action cutting all raises from the budget, a move which sparked a one-day walkout by more than 50 employes Wednesday.

EACH OF THE COUNTY'S nine elected officials called for the reinstatement of the raises Friday, telling the board they favored a larger tax increase or the cutting of programs not required by law, such as the health clinics and county nursing home, as an alternative to the raise cuts.

But board members said they wanted to keep as many persons working as possible. "I think many department heads are not helping us get the message across to employes," board member Roland Coles said. "We have a serious problem and we're trying to keep everyone working."

No reprisals were taken against the dissident employes who had the support of their department heads in the Wednesday walkout. Those involved included employes from the county clerk's, treasurer's, state's attorney's and coroner's offices.

Several board members said they did not feel the $300 average raise was enough. Raises averaging $600 per employe had been proposed originally.

BOARD MEMBER Mariellen Sabato said another $300 per employe could be added with an emergency appropriation in mid-year if county revenues permit.

Early in the meeting Friday a $500 per employe increase had been approved, but was rejected when the first vote on the budget was taken.

Approval of the budget package was required Friday because the fiscal year begins Dec. 1.

The $40 million package includes a $642,000 deficit in the corporate fund, which is less than the $1 million deficit predicted in original estimates.

The county budget has had a deficit in the corporate fund for the past four years, said Finance Dir. Robert Morrison. The corporate fund accounts for about $14.3 million of the total $40 million budget package.

MORE THAN $221,000 was cut from the corporate fund budget Friday in areas of seminar and travel expenses, dues and subscriptions, additional furniture and fixtures, and miscellaneous items.

Friday's session lasted some six hours, in contrast to the 12-hour board meeting held Tuesday on the budget.

"As long as there is a quorum, we'll stay here," Board Pres. John Balen said. "A simple majority of the quorum will pass the budget. Put away your personal animosities and get the job done," he told the board.

Much of the first part of Friday's meeting was spent in debate over parliamentary procedures and confusion over whether the board could continue its Tuesday discussion without reconsidering the entire budget.

U S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, has set Dec. 19 as the deadline for accepting requests for nomination to attend service academies.

Department stores have increased their security staffs in preparation for the expected heavy Christmas crowd and its accompanying shoplifters, and the Schaumburg Police Dept. will join with the regular Woodfield security police patroling both inside and outside the mall.

SALES EXPECTATIONS in general are high. Merchants said business was not too bad last year during the recession, so they are expecting very good sales this year.

Mike Silverman, president of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, said, "All merchants who are trying to get business should succeed. If you're aggressive and have a good product or service, there are enough people in this area that there's no reason for business to be bad."

Phyllis Peszek of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Assn., said merchants there are expecting a good season. Helen DeWitt, public relations director for the Hawthorn Shopping Center in Libertyville, said she expects sales to be up over last year since more than 100 stores in the 3-year-old mall are now open.

Carol Pisasras, a saleswoman at Teddy's a women's fashions store, said the warm November weather cut into expected sales.

"Who needs winter clothing when it's 70 degrees outside," she said. "Now that there is some snow on the ground, people are more in the Christmas-buying spirit."

CHUCK SACCARO, owner of the Craft Shop at Randhurst, said sales last month were "incredible."

"Most of the people who shop here make their own Christmas gifts," he explained. "They buy what they need in November to give them time to make things."

Silger said many items in Sears are selling so fast that it is difficult to fill orders.

"There is a lot more investment in family entertainment gifts," Silger said "Our hottest item is "Pong," a $99 ping pong game which attaches to a TV set. We can't get enough of them. A type of pinball machine called Pachinko is selling fast at $50. People seem to realize they should be spending more time with their families. Instead of watching TV all night, they're attaching a Pong machine to the set and playing Pong."

Silger said other fast-selling items are mood rings, blow dryers, electronic watches for men and women, curling irons, leisure suits and anything made out of prewashed denim.

"PEOPLE ARE BUYING higher-quality items with longer lasting features— top of the line appliances, better quality clothing," he said. "Inflation is high, the dollar is hard to earn, and people are tired of getting little use out of something they paid good money for."

On what is traditionally described by merchants as the busiest day of the year, crowds in this area were a mixture of dedicated shoppers, impatient husbands, kids eyeing Santa and some looking for something to do.

"I'm waiting, my son's sleeping in this stroller, and my wife's shopping," said a Morton Grove man perched on a ledge in front of J C. Penney's. "We're definitely buying today. We want to get as much shopping done as possible."

At Randhurst, where the scene was much the same, Robert Moylan said he was there because of "my wife. Otherwise I wouldn't be here." He does not like shopping and does not usually indulge in it, and the worst part is the "waiting," he said, as he waited for his wife.

Jean Petzold of Niles said only one thing could bring her and her two sons to Randhurst the day after Thanksgiving. "Old St. Nick. You can't do any shopping when you've got two little kids with you."

R. Bischoffer of Arlington Heights was done with her shopping, but said she came to Randhurst so her grandson could see Santa Claus. Marion Madison of Deerfield only had odds and ends to finish up and said she was there primarily for "a day of enjoyment."

Explorer students' trip

Explorer Law Post students, sponsored by the Kemper Insurance Companies, Long Grove, recently took their first field trip which included a visit with Judge Abraham Marovitz of Cook County Circuit Court.

Marovitz talked with students in his chambers and answered their questions about the legal profession. The judge also showed his collection of Lincoln memorabilia.

Students also met with Sen. Charles Percy's executive assistant, Jerry McMahon.

Other stops on the trip included a visit to the Sears Tower Skydeck and the Chicago Title & Trust Co.

Jacobs back on plan unit

Rodney L. Jacobs, 520 Springside Ln., Buffalo Grove, recently was reappointed to the plan commission by the village board.

Jacobs, an attorney, has served on the commission for about a year.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Friday nominated U.S. Appeals Judge John Paul Stevens of Chicago to succeed retired Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, calling Stevens the "best qualified" of all the men and women boosted for the job.

Ford offered no clues as to whether the 55-year-old Stevens — unknown to most of the nation — might be expected to strengthen the conservative or the dwindling liberal wing of the court, nor any indication what his judicial views or political allegiance might be.

But professional lawyers who know the gray-haired, soft-spoken Stevens described him, in the words of one, as "a man you can't really type as a liberal or a conservative, a very pragmatic thinker" — and they unanimously expressed professional enthusiasm at the choice.

IN A SURPRISE action scheduled only hours in advance, Ford appeared before White House reporters on the eve of his departure for China and announced he had concluded a two-week search for "the person I believe to be best qualified to serve as an associate justice of the Supreme Court."

It was Stevens, a member of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago since 1970 and a brilliant lawyer who had the enthusiastic support of both the American Bar Assn. and Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi.

Ford's announcement ended speculation he might nominate the first woman Supreme Court Justice as his wife and many feminists urged him to do — or choose some well known, but possibly controversial, candidate such as Solicitor Gen. Robert Bork.

"Judge Stevens is held in the highest esteem by his colleagues in the legal profession and the judiciary and has had an outstanding career in the practice and teaching of law as well as on the federal bench," Ford said in his nationally broadcast announcement.

"I am confident that he will bring both professional and personal qualities of the highest order to the Supreme Court."

IN CHICAGO, Stevens told reporters he would "do everything in my power to render the best possible judicial service of which I am capable. . . "If the Senate finds my qualifications acceptable I will begin the new assignment as expeditiously as possible and will do my utmost to discharge the responsibilities of the new office in a manner consistent with the finest traditions of a great institution."

Douglas, the man he would succeed, declined comment on the nomination.

Ford, who had submitted a list of at least 15 potential nominees to the ABA for its recommendations, said he had "conducted a thorough search and considered an extensive list of distinguished men and women to fill" the vacancy left by Douglas — a vacancy that reduced the liberal wing of Chief Justice Warren Burger's court to two members: Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall.

In Friday kidnap-murder

by JOHN MAES

A Mount Prospect man has been charged with the kidnaping and murder of his 17-year-old ex-girlfriend while her parents slept.

The body of Pamela Keeley, 1606 Algonquin Rd., clad only in underpants and a white T-shirt, was dumped along a roadside at Belmont Avenue and Noyes Street near Arlington Heights early Friday. She was shot five times in the head and chest.

Her father Jack Keeley said, "My wife and I were sound asleep through the whole thing." They were notified of the killing by police.

IN CUSTODY IS Juan Aldape, 19, of 549 Dempster St., an employe at Universal Oil Products Co., Des Plaines. He has been charged with murder, aggravated kidnaping and burglary, said Lt. Frank Braun of the Sheriff's Police.

The girl was a senior at Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, where the two had met, and had planned to become a stewardess with United Airlines following graduation, her father said. "She said it was something she'd like to do," he said.

Pam Keeley

Braun said Aldape allegedly shot the girl outside a gas station about a block away from where the body was found. Police were uncertain of the time of the shooting.

The girl was taken to Northwest Community Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

Police from Arlington Heights arrived on the scene about 6:45 a.m. after receiving two calls, one from a motorist who saw the body and reported it as an injury accident.

BRAUN SAID AFTER the shooting, Aldape reported the incident to Northwest Central Dispatch Center, a police radio communications system covering Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village and Buffalo Grove departments.

Braun said Aldape was later arrested at his apartment without struggle and the alleged murder

Village officials weigh bids for municipal building job

Elk Grove Village officials are reviewing three bid proposals for remodeling the lower level of the municipal building.

One of the purposes of the remodeling is to provide more room for police department services, such as the youth services department and a crime laboratory. A permanent community service office with private counseling and interview rooms for social workers also will be created by the remodeling.

THE THREE BIDS, as expected, were more than double the original

Saturday

by KAREN BLECHA

Repent and rejoice. These are the two words that symbolize Advent, the church season that begins Sunday.

At Roman Catholic and Protestant churches throughout the area, families will light the first candle on the Advent wreath to welcome the season that prepares for Christmas and the coming of Christ.

Advent is a season that has changed at many churches over the years. Years ago it was a season of penance; today it is also a season for rejoicing.

"In past history the color purple used during Advent was a sign of penance," said the Rev. James Fiosi, of St. Hubert's Catholic Church in Hoffman Estates.

"TODAY IT is more of a joyful celebration — a waiting for the coming of Christ," he said.

The season of Advent is second only to Easter in importance in most churches. The term "advent" is of secular origin, referring to the official reception of royalty.

In the Roman Catholic Church, Advent is a time of preparation for Christmas and a season of looking forward to Christ's second coming at the end of time. The first part of the season focuses on the glorious return of the Lord while the second part accents the Lord's birth.

The symbols of the season are the Advent wreath, which symbolizes the unending God, and the Jesse tree. The Advent wreath has four candles, each one representing one of the four Sundays before Christmas. Each Sunday one of the candles is lit.

At the Church of the Incarnation United Methodist, Arlington Heights, the candles have added significance, said the Rev. Larry Hilkemann. The candles symbolize the Wise Men, Shepherds, Mary and Joseph who obeyed the Lord and the birth of Christ.

"WE ALSO have a Jesse tree which is a reminder of the Old Testament and that God said Jesus would be coming," Hilkemann said. At Church of the In-

Hanukkah: Festival of Lights

by JILL BETTNER

The Hanukkah candles the Milton Jacobs family will light this weekend in their Hoffman Estates home symbolize a personal commitment to preserving the special meaning of the beautiful eight-day Festival of Lights.

They believe without this kind of dedication, the significance of Hanukkah could be lost and the customs subtly "Christianized" in the Northwest suburbs.

Today, Jews are outnumbered nearly four-to-one in the Northwest suburbs, creating some problems for families like the Jacobs who want their two young daughters, Bonni, 7, and Cheryl, 5, to understand and appreciate the uniqueness of their own religion and heritage.

HANUKKAH IS PROBABLY the toughest time to protect Jewish individuality, she said, especially for children. For a while, Bonni and Cheryl attended public schools. Concerned that the girls might feel left out of things with the general preoccupation with Christmas, Mrs. Jacobs would request time to speak to their classes about Hanukkah.

Her husband agreed, saying, "Christmas puts a lot of pressure on Jewish children. Hanukkah is important, but it isn't a holiday that should be equated to Christmas in importance. But because the two happen about the same time, it is."

Bonni and Cheryl now attend Woodfield Jewish Day School, Hoffman Estates, where children begin learning Hebrew and Jewish history in kindergarten.

Bonni knows all about Hanukkah, which, she explained, "reminds us of all the things that happened in the story of the Maccabees."

THE MACCABEES were a group of guerrillas who literally saved the Jewish religion from being wiped out by the Syrians in 165 B.C. Syrian King Antiochus decreed that year that the only temple of worship for Jews in Palestine was to be destroyed. The temple was taken over, idols placed inside and a pig sacrificed on the altar, desecrating the House of God.

Refusing to accept religious genocide, the Mac-

JUAN ALDAPE is led into Niles court Friday after his arrest in the shooting death of an ex-girlfriend Pamela Keeley, 17, 1606 Algonquin Rd., Mount Prospect. Aldape, 19, of Mount Prospect is being held on charges of murder, aggravated kidnapping and burglary.

weapon, a 22-cal. pistol, was confiscated.

Aldape and the girl had been dating and broke up a few weeks ago, Braun said.

Police say Aldape broke into the apartment by smashing the glass in a kitchen door. The elder Keeley said the family returned from a Thanksgiving get-together about 2:30 a.m.

The parents notified Mount Prospect police about 8:30 a.m. after they woke up and discovered the break-in and their daughter missing, Braun said.

Aldape was arraigned Friday afternoon before Associate Judge Albert H. LaPlante in the Niles branch of circuit Court. The suspect was ordered taken to County jail without bound pending a Dec. 2 court date in Niles.

Keeley also said his daughter had begun working part time at Sambo's Restaurant, Mount Prospect, about a week ago.

Lions Pres. Gayle Bantner said, "We netted close to $2,000 this year, in one of our most successful drives. I wish to thank all village residents for their generous response and to all volunteers who helped in this most important cause."

Bantner said the profits will be dispersed with $200 going to each of Hope School, Lutheran Braille Workers of Elk Grove Village and future activities for the blind. The balance will be distributed through the Illinois Lions Foundation to the Hadley School For the Blind, Leader Dog, Dialogue and Illinois Camp Lions For the Blind.

Village weighs bids for remodeling work

$12,000 estimate for the work, which involves conversion of the existing lunchroom, storage areas and multipurpose room.

Coney said the bids were $26,650 by Fitzsimmons-Rill Construction Co., $31,627 by Siezak Construction Co. and $31,973 by Filmore Construction Co. He previously had said he expected bids "between $20,000 and $30,000."

Based on the original cost estimates of last August, some $12,000 of the village's federal revenue sharing funds were set aside. Village employes are expected to do as much of the remodeling as possible, Coney said. A major portion of the remodeling involves changes to the municipal building's plumbing, heating and electrical systems.

Drawings for the project were prepared by architects Otis and Associates, who designed the municipal building.

Merchants delighted: 'recession over'

Christmas shoppers pack Northwest stores

A Herald staff report

Record crowds of shoppers streamed into Northwest suburban stores Friday to begin their holiday shopping, kicking off what is expected to be the highest-volume sales season ever.

At Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg, where crows of almost 125,000 packed the mall the day after Thanksgiving last year, officials estimated 20 per cent more shoppers this year.

Merchants throughout the area believe the recession has ended, shoppers are more confident about money and Christmas sales will break all previous records.

AT WOODFIELD, lockers for coats and packages were full by 10 a.m., parking spaces were at a premium by 11, and by noon, lines streamed outside restaurants and rest rooms.

The red and purple steps in the center of the mall were covered with shoppers seeking a rest from heavy shopping bags and shoulder-to-shoulder traffic.

Still, not many shoppers seemed to mind the crowds.

"I like to go shopping when it's like this," one teenager was overheard saying to her friend. "Salespeople don't bug you when it's this crowded."

David Silger, merchandising manager at Sears at Woodfield, said the day after Thanksgiving is so busy because there are several things happening simultaneously that do not usually occur at the same time.

BESIDES THE traditional desire to start Christmas shopping after Thanksgiving, Silger said, many firms are closed, enabling more people to go shopping; with husbands home, more wives could leave their children home and shop in peace; days when schools are closed are busy because high school students come to the malls and mothers bring young children in for clothes; and banks paid out Christmas Club money last week.

"In departments where people traditionally do their Christmas shopping, like jewelry and cosmetics, we may have as many as 50 per cent additional salespeople," Silger said.

"We're geared for this type of traffic all the time because we pack this store every Saturday and Sunday," he said. "This is just more continuous. It starts heavy and it ends heavy."

Department stores have increased their security staffs in preparation for the expected heavy Christmas crowd and its accompanying shoplifters, and the Schaumburg Police Dept. will join with the regular Woodfield security police patroling both inside and outside the mall.

A Herald staff report

Record crowds of shoppers streamed into Northwest suburban stores Friday to begin their holiday shopping, kicking off what is expected to be the highest-volume sales season ever

At Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg, where crows of almost 125,000 packed the mall the day after Thanksgiving last year, officials estimated 20 per cent more shoppers this year.

Merchants throughout the area believe the recession has ended, shoppers are more confident about money and Christmas sales will break all previous records.

AT WOODFIELD, lockers for coats and packages were full by 10 a.m., parking spaces were at a premium by 11, and by noon, lines streamed outside restaurants and rest rooms

The red and purple steps in the center of the mall were covered with shoppers seeking a rest from heavy shopping bags and shoulder-to-shoulder traffic.

Still, not many shoppers seemed to mind the crowds

"I like to go shopping when it's like this," one teenager was overheard saying to her friend. "Salespeople don't bug then it's this crowded"

David Silger, merchandising manager at Sears at Woodfield, said the day after Thanksgiving is so busy because there are several things happening simultaneously that do not usually occur at the same time.

BESIDES THE traditional desire to start Christmas shopping after Thanksgiving, Silger said, many firms are closed, enabling more people to go shopping; with husbands home, more wives could leave their children home and shop in peace; days when schools are closed are busy because high school students come to the malls and mothers bring young children in for clothes; and banks paid out Christmas Club money last week.

"In departments where people traditionally do their Christmas shopping, like jewelry and cosmetics, we may have as many as 50 per cent additional salespeople," Silger said.

"We're geared for this type of traffic all the time because we pack this store every Saturday and Sunday," he said. "This is just more continuous. It starts heavy and it ends heavy."

Department stores have increased their security staffs in preparation for the expected heavy Christmas crowd and its accompanying shoplifters, and the Schaumburg Police Dept. will join with the regular Woodfield security police patrolling both inside and outside the mall.

SALES EXPECTATIONS in general are high. Merchants said business was not too bad last year during the recession, so they are expecting very good sales this year.

Mike Silverman, president of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, said, "All merchants who are trying to get business should succeed. If you're aggressive and have a good product or service, there are enough people in this area that there's no reason for business to be bad."

Phyllis Peszek of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Assn., said merchants there are expecting a good season. Helen DeWitt, public relations director for the Hawthorn Shopping Center in Libertyville, said she expects sales to be up over last year since more than 100 stores in the 3-year-old mall are now open.

Carol Pisasras, a saleswoman at Teddy's a women's fashions store, said the warm November weather cut into expected sales.

"Who needs winter clothing when it's 70 degrees outside," she said. "Now that there is some snow on the ground, people are more in the Christmas-buying spirit."

CHUCK SACCARO, owner of the Craft Shop at Randhurst, said sales last month were "incredible."

"Most of the people who shop here make their own Christmas gifts," he explained. "They buy what they need in November to give them time to make things."

Silger said many items in Sears are

Christians, Jews begin holiday seasons

by KAREN BLECHA

Repent and rejoice. These are the two words that symbolize Advent, the church season that begins Sunday.

At Roman Catholic and Protestant churches throughout the area, families will light the first candle on the Advent wreath to welcome the season that prepares for Christmas and the coming of Christ.

Advent is a season that has changed at many churches over the years. Years ago it was a season of penance; today it is also a season for rejoicing.

"In past history the color purple used during Advent was a sign of penance," said the Rev. James Flosi, of St. Hubert's Catholic Church in Hoffman Estates.

"TODAY IT is more of a joyful celebration — a waiting for the coming of Christ," he said.

The season of Advent is second only to Easter in importance in most churches. The term "advent" is of secular origin, referring to the official reception of royalty.

In the Roman Catholic Church, Advent is a time of preparation for Christmas and a season of looking forward to Christ's second coming at the end of time. The first part of the season focuses on the glorious return of the Lord while the second part accents the Lord's birth.

The symbols of the season are the Advent wreath, which symbolizes the unending God, and the Jesse tree The Advent wreath has four candles, each one representing one of the four Sundays before Christmas. Each Sunday one of the candles is lit.

At the Church of the Incarnation United Methodist, Arlington Heights, the candles have added significance, said the Rev. Larry Hilkemann The candles symbolize the Wise Men, Shepherds, Mary and Joseph who obeyed the Lord and the birth of Christ.

"WE ALSO have a Jesse tree which is a reminder of the Old Testament and that God said Jesus would be coming," Hilkemann said. At Church of the In-

Hanukkah: Festival of Lights

by JILL BETTNER

The Hanukkah candles the Milton Jacobs family will light this weekend in their Hoffman Estates home symbolize a personal commitment to preserving the special meaning of the beautiful eight-day Festival of Lights.

They believe without this kind of dedication, the significance of Hanukkah could be lost and the customs subtly "Christianized" in the Northwest suburbs.

Today, Jews are outnumbered nearly four-to-one in the Northwest suburbs, creating some problems for families like the Jacobs who want their two young daughters, Bonni, 7, and Cheryl, 5, to understand and appreciate the uniqueness of their own religion and heritage.

HANUKKAH IS PROBABLY the toughest time to protect Jewish individuality, she said, especially for children. For a while, Bonni and Cheryl attended public schools. Concerned that the girls might feel left out of things with the general preoccupation with Christmas, Mrs. Jacobs would request time to speak to their classes about Hanukkah.

Her husband agreed, saying, "Christmas puts a lot of pressure on Jewish children. Hanukkah is important, but it isn't a holiday that should be equated to Christmas in importance. But because the two happen about the same time, it is."

Bonni and Cheryl now attend Woodfield Jewish Day School, Hoffman Estates, where children begin learning Hebrew and Jewish history in kindergarten.

Bonni knows all about Hanukkah, which, she explained, "reminds us of all the things that happened in the story of the Maccabees."

THE MACCABEES were a group of guerrillas who literally saved the Jewish religion from being wiped out by the Syrians in 165 B.C. Syrian King Antiochus decreed that year that the only temple of worship for Jews in Palestine was to be destroyed. The temple was taken over, idols placed inside and a pig sacrificed on the altar, desecrating the House of God.

In early-Friday kidnaping, murder

by JOHN MAES

A Mount Prospect man has been charged with the kidnaping and murder of his 17-year-old ex-girlfriend while her parents slept.

The body of Pamela Keeley, 1606 Algonquin Rd., clad only in underpants and a white T-shirt, was dumped along a roadside at Belmont Avenue and Noyes Street near Arlington Heights early Friday. She was shot five times in the head and chest.

Her father Jack Keeley said, "My wife and I were sound asleep through the whole thing." They were notified of the killing by police.

Pam Keeley

IN CUSTODY IS Juan Aldape, 19, of 549 Dempster St., an employe at Universal Oil Products Co., Des Plaines. He has been charged with murder, aggravated kidnaping and burglary, said Lt. Frank Braun of the Sheriff's Police.

The girl was a senior at Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, where the two had met, and had planned to become a stewardess with United Airlines following graduation, her father said. "She said it was something she'd like to do," he said.

Braun said Aldape allegedly shot the girl outside a gas station about a block away from where the body was found. Police were uncertain of the time of the shooting.

The girl was taken to Northwest Community Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

Police from Arlington Heights arrived on the scene about 6:45 a.m. after receiving two calls, one from a motorist who saw the body and reported it as an injury accident.

BRAUN SAID AFTER the shooting, Aldape reported the incident to Northwest Central Dispatch Center, a police radio communications system covering Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village and Buffalo Grove departments.

Braun said Aldape was later arrested at his apartment without struggle and the alleged murder weapon, a 22-cal. pistol, was confiscated.

Aldape and the girl had been dating and broke up a few weeks ago, Braun said.

Police say Aldape broke into the apartment by smashing the glass in a kitchen door. The elder Keeley said the family returned from a Thanksgiving get-together about 2:30 a.m.

The parents notified Mount Prospect police about 8:30 a.m. after they woke up and discovered the break-in and their daughter missing, Braun said.

Aldape was arraigned Friday afternoon before Associate Judge Albert H. LaPlante in the Niles branch of circuit Court. The suspect was ordered taken to County jail without bound pending a Dec. 2 court date in Niles.

Keeley also said his daughter had begun working part time at Sambo's Restaurant, Mount Prospect, about a week ago.

Youth key to anti-vandalism program

EDITOR'S NOTE: Elected officials in Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg will play an important role in the community effort to stop vandalism. Their plans and goals in the "Be Aware-Be Thankful" campaign are discussed today in the final part of The Herald's series on the program.

by PAT GERLACH

(Last of a series)

Officials of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates say they will rely heavily on the youth of the two communities to help curtail vandalism.

Both villages have proclaimed November as Human Relations Month, and community officials are making plans to continue a concentrated 12-month program in which vandalism problems will be attacked from a number of avenues.

Schaumburg Pres. Raymond Kessell plans to form a youth council. Its members would serve as an advisory group to him in formulating methods of approaching the problem.

"I INTEND TO SEEK counsel from all parts of the community, but during the past several months a number of young people in our high school political science groups have impressed me greatly with their particular talents," Kessell said.

But, Kessell doesn't plan to hold rigidly structured formal meetings with high school students, and says he leans toward "informal rap sessions" as a more practical approach to bridging the youth-adult communications gap.

"We live in such a fast society today that in many cases we just don't have time for our children and their problems. Unfortunately, we can't go to these youngsters if we've indicated in the past we have no time for them," Kessell said.

The village president believes it important for adults and youth to learn more about each other.

"IF THEY SEE our problems first hand, I think they will be better able to understand," he said.

Hoffman Estates Pres. Virginia Hayter has formulated some long-range plans which also include youth involvement, though she said the ideas have not yet been discussed by the village board.

Mrs. Hayter said she favors "total involvement" of the village youth commission and other auxiliary boards and commissions and indicated the starting point would be the village public health and safety committee.

"It's a matter of getting down to basics and talking about value systems. We are going to have to sit down and think about the total person and how we can touch him," she said.

Mrs. Hayter said she believes the total community, including schools, churches and governmental units, must become united in making citizens of all ages more aware of their responsibilities.

selling so fast that it is difficult to fill orders.

"There is a lot more investment in family entertainment gifts," Silger said "Our hottest item is "Pong," a $99 ping pong game which attaches to a TV set. We can't get enough of them. A type of pinball machine called Pachinko is selling fast at $50. People seem to realize they should be spending more time with their families. Instead of watching TV all night, they're attaching a Pong machine to the set and playing Pong."

Silger said other fast-selling items are mood rings, blow dryers, electronic watches for men and women, curling irons, leisure suits and anything made out of prewashed denim.

"PEOPLE ARE BUYING higher-quality items with longer lasting features— top of the line appliances, better quality clothing," he said. "Inflation is high, the dollar is hard to earn, and people are tired of getting little use out of something they paid good money for."

On what is traditionally described by merchants as the busiest day of the year, crowds in this area were a mixture of dedicated shoppers, impatient husbands, kids eyeing Santa and some looking for something to do.

"I'm waiting, my son's sleeping in this stroller, and my wife's shopping." said a Morton Grove man perched on a ledge in front of J.C. Penney's. "We're definitely buying today. We want to get as much shopping done as possible."

At Randhurst, where the scene was much the same, Robert Moylan said he was there because of "my wife. Otherwise I wouldn't be here." He does not like shopping and does not usually indulge in it, and the worst part is the "waiting," he said, as he waited for his wife.

Jean Petzold of Niles said only one thing could bring her and her two sons to Randhurst the day after Thanksgiving: "Old St. Nick. You can't do any shopping when you've got two little kids with you."

R. Bischoffer of Arlington Heights was done with her shopping, but said she came to Randhurst so her grandson could see Santa Claus. Marion Madison of Deerfield only had odds and ends to finish up and said she was there primarily for "a day of enjoyment."

Soviet Jews topic of Beth Tikvah talk

The plight of Soviet Jews will be the topic of conversation Dec. 7 at a "Coffee for Soviet Jewry" in Hoffman Estates.

Mrs. Lubov Arankovich — who fled the Soviet Union — will speak to the group about the plight of Russian Jews at 7:30 p.m. at Beth Tikvah Congregation in Hoffman Estates.

Procedures for the adoption of and correspondence with Russian Jewish families will also be discussed at the meeting.

The meeting is being co-sponsored by Beth Tikvah Congregation, Joel A. Greenberg Lodge, B'nai B'rith; Or Chadash Creek Unit, National Council of Jewish Women; Sheffield Chapter, Women's American Ort, and the Woodfield Jewish Congregation.

Stevens high court choice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Friday nominated U.S. Appeals Judge John Paul Stevens of Chicago to succeed retired Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, calling Stevens the "best qualified" of all the men and women boosted for the job.

Ford offered no clues as to whether the 55-year-old Stevens — unknown to most of the nation — might be expected to strengthen the conservative or the dwindling liberal wing of the court, nor any indication what his judicial views or political allegiance might be.

But professional lawyers who know the gray-haired, soft-spoken Stevens described him, in the words of one, as "a man you can't really type as a liberal or a conservative, a very pragmatic thinker" — and they unanimously expressed professional enthusiasm at the choice.

IN A SURPRISE action scheduled only hours in advance, Ford appeared before White House reporters on the eve of his departure for China and announced he had concluded a two-week search for "the person I believe to be best qualified to serve as an associate justice of the Supreme Court."

It was Stevens, a member of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago since 1970 and a brilliant lawyer who had the enthusiastic support of both the American Bar Assn. and Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi.

Ford's announcement ended speculation he might nominate the first woman Supreme Court Justice as his wife and many feminists urged him to do — or choose some well known, but possibly controversial, candidate such as Solicitor Gen. Robert Bork.

"Judge Stevens is held in the highest esteem by his colleagues in the legal profession and the judiciary and has had an outstanding career in the practice and teaching of law as well as on the federal bench," Ford said in his nationally broadcast announcement.

"I am confident that he will bring both professional and personal qualities of the highest order to the Supreme Court."

IN CHICAGO, Stevens told reporters he would "do everything in my power to render the best possible judicial service of which I am capable. . .

"If the Senate finds my qualifications acceptable I will begin the new assignment as expeditiously as possible and will do my utmost to discharge the responsibilities of the new office in a manner consistent with the finest traditions of a great institution."

Douglas, the man he would succeed, declined comment on the nomination.

Ford, who had submitted a list of at least 15 potential nominees to the ABA for its recommendations, said he had "conducted a thorough search and considered an extensive list of distinguished men and women to fill" the vacancy left by Douglas — a vacancy that reduced the liberal wing of Chief Justice Warren Burger's court to two members: Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall.

'Recession's over,' merchants say

Holiday shoppers pack stores

A Herald staff report

Record crowds of shoppers streamed into Northwest suburban stores Friday to begin their holiday shopping, kicking off what is expected to be the highest-volume sales season ever.

At Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg, where crows of almost 125,000 packed the mall the day after Thanksgiving last year, officials estimated 20 per cent more shoppers this year.

Merchants throughout the area believe the recession has ended, shoppers are more confident about money and Christmas sales will break all previous records.

AT WOODFIELD, lockers for coats and packages were full by 10 a.m., parking spaces were at a premium by 11, and by noon, lines streamed outside restaurants and rest rooms.

The red and purple steps in the center of the mall were covered with shoppers seeking a rest from heavy shopping bags and shoulder-to-shoulder traffic.

Still, not many shoppers seemed to mind the crowds.

"I like to go shopping when it's like this," one teenager was overheard saying to her friend. "Salespeople don't bug you when it's this crowded."

David Silger, merchandising manager at Sears at Woodfield, said the day after Thanksgiving is so busy because there are several things happening simultaneously that do not usually occur at the same time.

BESIDES THE traditional desire to start Christmas shopping after Thanksgiving, Silger said, many firms are closed, enabling more people to go shopping; with husbands home, more wives could leave their children home and shop in peace; days when schools are closed are busy because high school students come to the malls and mothers bring young children in for clothes; and banks paid out Christmas Club money last week.

"In departments where people traditionally do their Christmas shopping, like jewelry and cosmetics, we may have as many as 50 per cent additional salespeople," Silger said.

"We're geared for this type of traffic all the time because we pack this store every Saturday and Sunday," he said. "This is just more continuous. It starts heavy and it ends heavy."

Department stores have increased their security staffs in preparation for the expected heavy Christmas crowd and its accompanying shoplifters, and the Schaumburg Police Dept. will join with the regular Woodfield security police patroling both inside and outside the mall.

SALES EXPECTATIONS in general are high. Merchants said business was not too bad last year during the recession, so they are expecting very good sales this year.

Mike Silverman, president of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, said, "All merchants who are trying to get business should succeed. If you're aggressive and have a good product or service, there are enough people in this area that there's no reason for business to be bad."

Phyllis Peszek of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Assn., said merchants there are expecting a good season. Helen DeWitt, public relations director for the Hawthorn Shopping Center in Libertyville, said she expects sales to be up over last year since more than 100 stores in the 3-year-old mall are now open.

Carol Pisasras, a saleswoman at Teddy's a women's fashions store, said the warm November weather cut into expected sales.

"Who needs winter clothing when it's 70 degrees outside," she said. "Now that there is some snow on the ground, people are more in the Christmas-buying spirit."

CHUCK SACCARO, owner of the Craft Shop at Randhurst, said sales last month were "incredible."

"Most of the people who shop here make their own Christmas gifts," he explained. "They buy what they need in November to give them time to make things."

Silger said many items in Sears are selling so fast that it is difficult to fill orders.

"There is a lot more investment in family entertainment gifts," Silger said "Our hottest item is "Pong," a $99 ping pong game which attaches to a TV set. We can't get enough of them. A type of pinball machine called Pachinko is selling fast at $50. People seem to realize they should be spending more time with their families. Instead of watching TV all night, they're attaching a Pong machine to the set and playing Pong."

Silger said other fast-selling items are mood rings, blow dryers, electronic watches for men and women, curling irons, leisure suits and anything made out of prewashed denim.

"PEOPLE ARE BUYING higher-quality items with longer lasting features— top of the line appliances, better quality clothing," he said. "Inflation is high, the dollar is hard to earn, and people are tired of getting little use out of something they paid good money for."

On what is traditionally described by merchants as the busiest day of the year, crowds in this area were a mixture of dedicated shoppers, impatient husbands, kids eyeing Santa and some looking for something to do.

"I'm waiting, my son's sleeping in this stroller, and my wife's shopping," said a Morton Grove man perched on a ledge in front of J.C. Penney's. "We're definitely buying today. We want to get as much shopping done as possible."

At Randhurst, where the scene was much the same, Robert Moylan said he was there because of "my wife. Otherwise I wouldn't be here." He does not like shopping and does not usually indulge in it, and the worst part is the "waiting," he said, as he waited for his wife.

Jean Petzold of Niles said only one thing could bring her and her two sons to Randhurst the day after Thinksgiving: "Old St. Nick. You can't do any shopping when you've got two little kids with you."

R. Bischoffer of Arlington Heights was done with her shopping, but said she came to Randhurst so her grandson could see Santa Claus. Marion Madison of Deerfield only had odds and ends to finish up and said she was there primarily for "a day of enjoyment."

Teacher to oppose Graham for Senate in primary

A Bloomingdale Township teacher announced Tuesday he would run against State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, in the Republican primary for the 2nd Legislative District.

Terrence Ayers, 33, of 175 Kingston Ln., Bloomingdale, said he decided to become a candidate for the Senate because he disagrees with Graham's voting record.

Ayers also serves as a Bloomingdale Township auditor. He is a history teacher at Fenton High School, Bensenville.

Ayers said he probably would not have voted differently than Graham on sustaining Gov. Daniel Walker's veto of state school-aid funds, but he was critical of Walker and Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago for making school aid a political issue.

Ayers charged that Graham no longer represents the views of the district. He cited Graham's attempt to abolish the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission as appalling.

"That would have caused the state to lose about $90 million in federal funds for law enforcement," he said.

Graham's bill died last week in the General Assembly when the Illinois House failed to override Walker's veto of the bill.

Lion's sale nets $2,000 for blind

The Elk Grove Village Lions Club raised almost $2,000 during its recent Annual Candy Day Sale.

Lions Pres. Gayle Bantner said, "We netted close to $2,000 this year, in one of our most successful drives. I wish to thank all village residents for their generous response and to all volunteers who helped in this most important cause."

Bantner said the profits will be dispersed with $200 going to each of Hope School, Lutheran Braille Workers of Elk Grove Village and future activities for the blind. The balance will be distributed through the Illinois Lions Foundation to the Hadley School For the Blind, Leader Dog, Dialogue and Illinois Camp Lions For the Blind.

Cub Scout Pack 39 of Buffalo Grove has collected canned goods which were given to a needy family in the area for Thanksgiving.

At a recent pack meeting awards were given to David Hicks, Gary Varsting and Tim O'Conor. The next pack meeting is Dec. 17.

Stevens high court choice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Friday nominated U.S. Appeals Judge John Paul Stevens of Chicago to succeed retired Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, calling Stevens the "best qualified" of all the men and women boosted for the job.

Ford offered no clues as to whether the 55-year-old Stevens — unknown to most of the nation — might be expected to strengthen the conservative or the dwindling liberal wing of the court, nor any indication what his judicial views or political allegiance might be.

But professional lawyers who know the gray-haired, soft-spoken Stevens described him, in the words of one, as "a man you can't really type as a liberal or a conservative, a very pragmatic thinker" — and they unanimously expressed professional enthusiasm at the choice.

IN A SURPRISE action scheduled only hours in advance, Ford appeared before White House reporters on the eve of his departure for China and announced he had concluded a two-week search for "the person I believe to be best qualified to serve as an associate justice of the Supreme Court."

It was Stevens, a member of the 7th U.S Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago since 1970 and a brilliant lawyer who had the enthusiastic support of both the American Bar Assn. and Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi.

Ford's announcement ended speculation he might nominate the first woman Supreme Court Justice as his wife and many feminists urged him to do — or choose some well known, but possibly controversial, candidate such as Solicitor Gen. Robert Bork.

"Judge Stevens is held in the highest esteem by his colleagues in the legal profession and the judiciary and has had an outstanding career in the practice and teaching of law as well as on the federal bench," Ford said in his nationally broadcast announcement.

"I am confident that he will bring both professional and personal qualities of the highest order to the Supreme Court."

IN CHICAGO, Stevens told reporters he would "do everything in my power to render the best possible judicial service of which I am capable. . .

"If the Senate finds my qualifications acceptable I will begin the new assignment as expeditiously as possible and will do my utmost to discharge the responsibilities of the new office in a manner consistent with the finest traditions of a great institution."

Douglas, the man he would succeed, declined comment on the nomination.

Ford, who had submitted a list of at least 15 potential nominees to the ABA for its recommendations, said he had "conducted a thorough search and considered an extensive list of distinguished men and women to fill" the vacancy left by Douglas — a vacancy that reduced the liberal wing of Chief Justice Warren Burger's court to two members· Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall.

In Friday kidnap-murder

by JOHN MAES

A Mount Prospect man has been charged with the kidnaping and murder of his 17 year-old ex-girlfriend while her parents slept

The body of Pamela Keeley, 1606 Algonquin Rd., clad only in underpants and a white T-shirt, was dumped along a roadside at Belmont Avenue and Noyes Street near Arlington Heights early Friday. She was shot five times in the head and chest.

Her father Jack Keeley said, "My wife and I were sound asleep through the whole thing." They were notified of the killing by police.

IN CUSTODY IS Juan Aldape, 19, of 549 Dempster St., an employe at Universal Oil Products Co., Des Plaines. He has been charged with murder, aggravated kidnaping and burglary, said Lt. Frank Braun of the Sheriff's Police.

Pam Keeley

The girl was a senior at Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, where the two had met, and had planned to become a stewardess with United Airlines following graduation, her father said. "She said it was something she'd like to do," he said.

Braun said Aldape allegedly shot the girl outside a gas station about a block away from where the body was found. Police were uncertain of the time of the shooting.

The girl was taken to Northwest Community Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

Police from Arlington Heights arrived on the scene about 6:45 a.m. after receiving two calls, one from a motorist who saw the body and reported it as an injury accident.

BRAUN SAID AFTER the shooting, Aldape reported the incident to Northwest Central Dispatch Center, a police radio communications system covering Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village and Buffalo Grove departments.

Braun said Aldape was later arrested at his apartment without struggle and the alleged murder

by LUISA GINNETTI

Palatine Park District officials this week said they will withhold a decision on a second referendum to purchase the Arlington Ice Spectrum until a petition drive by the Palatine Amateur Hockey Assn. is completed.

The association has proposed the referendum, which would seek voter approval to sell general-obligation bonds to finance the purchase of the privately owned ice arena, 647 Consumers Ave., Palatine. A referendum in June on the same proposal was defeated by a 3 to 1 margin.

Park district officials told the association in September at least 1,500 signatures on a petition would be needed for the board to consider sponsoring

Christians, Jews begin holiday seasons

by KAREN BLECHA

Repent and rejoice. These are the two words that symbolize Advent, the church season that begins Sunday.

At Roman Catholic and Protestant churches throughout the area, families will light the first candle on the Advent wreath to welcome the season that prepares for Christmas and the coming of Christ.

Advent is a season that has changed at many churches over the years. Years ago it was a season of penance; today it is also a season for rejoicing.

"In past history the color purple used during Advent was a sign of penance," said the Rev. James Flosi, of St. Hubert's Catholic Church in Hoffman Estates.

"TODAY IT is more of a joyful celebration — a waiting for the coming of Christ," he said.

The season of Advent is second only to Easter in importance in most churches. The term "advent" is of secular origin, referring to the official reception of royalty.

In the Roman Catholic Church, Advent is a time of preparation for Christmas and a season of looking forward to Christ's second coming at the end of time. The first part of the season focuses on the glorious return of the Lord while the second part accents the Lord's birth.

The symbols of the season are the Advent wreath, which symbolizes the unending God, and the Jesse tree. The Advent wreath has four candles, each one representing one of the four Sundays before Christmas. Each Sunday one of the candles is lit.

At the Church of the Incarnation United Methodist, Arlington Heights, the candles have added significance, said the Rev. Larry Hilkemann. The candles symbolize the Wise Men, Shepherds, Mary and Joseph who obeyed the Lord and the birth of Christ.

"WE ALSO have a Jesse tree which is a reminder of the Old Testament and that God said Jesus would be coming," Hilkemann said. At Church of the In-

Hanukkah: Festival of Lights

by JILL BETTNER

The Hanukkah candles the Milton Jacobs family will light this weekend in their Hoffman Estates home symbolize a personal commitment to preserving the special meaning of the beautiful eight-day Festival of Lights.

They believe without this kind of dedication, the significance of Hanukkah could be lost and the customs subtly "Christianized" in the Northwest suburbs.

Today, Jews are outnumbered nearly four-to-one in the Northwest suburbs, creating some problems for families like the Jacobs who want their two young daughters, Bonni, 7, and Cheryl, 5, to understand and appreciate the uniqueness of their own religion and heritage.

HANUKKAH IS PROBABLY the toughest time to protect Jewish individuality, she said, especially for children. For a while, Bonni and Cheryl attended public schools. Concerned that the girls might feel left out of things with the general preoccupation with Christmas, Mrs. Jacobs would request time to speak to their classes about Hanukkah.

Her husband agreed, saying, "Christmas puts a lot of pressure on Jewish children. Hanukkah is important, but it isn't a holiday that should be equated to Christmas in importance. But because the two happen about the same time, it is."

Bonni and Cheryl now attend Woodfield Jewish Day School, Hoffman Estates, where children begin learning Hebrew and Jewish history in kindergarten.

Bonni knows all about Hanukkah, which, she explained, "reminds us of all the things that happened in the story of the Maccabees."

THE MACCABEES were a group of guerrillas who literally saved the Jewish religion from being wiped out by the Syrians in 165 B.C. Syrian King Antiochus decreed that year that the only temple of worship for Jews in Palestine was to be destroyed. The temple was taken over, idols placed inside and a pig sacrificed on the altar, desecrating the House of God.

Refusing to accept religious genocide, the Mac-

'Recession's over,' merchants say

Holiday shoppers pack stores

A Herald staff report

Record crowds of shoppers streamed into Northwest suburban stores Friday to begin their holiday shopping, kicking off what is expected to be the highest-volume sales season ever.

At Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg, where crows of almost 125,000 packed the mall the day after Thanksgiving last year, officials estimated 20 per cent more shoppers this year.

Merchants throughout the area believe the recession has ended, shoppers are more confident about money and Christmas sales will break all previous records.

AT WOODFIELD, lockers for coats and packages were full by 10 a.m., parking spaces were at a premium by 11, and by noon, lines streamed outside restaurants and rest rooms.

The red and purple steps in the center of the mall were covered with shoppers seeking a rest from heavy shopping bags and shoulder-to-shoulder traffic.

Still, not many shoppers seemed to mind the crowds.

"I like to go shopping when it's like this," one teenager was overheard saying to her friend. "Salespeople don't bug you when it's this crowded."

David Silger, merchandising manager at Sears at Woodfield, said the day after Thanksgiving is so busy because there are several things happening simultaneously that do not usually occur at the same time.

BESIDES THE traditional desire to start Christmas shopping after Thanksgiving, Silger said, many firms are closed, enabling more people to go shopping; with husbands home, more wives could leave their children home and shop in peace; days when schools are closed are busy because high school students come to the malls and mothers bring young children in for clothes; and banks paid out Christmas Club money last week.

"In departments where people traditionally do their Christmas shopping, like jewelry and cosmetics, we may have as many as 50 per cent additional salespeople," Silger said.

"We're geared for this type of traffic all the time because we pack this store every Saturday and Sunday," he said. "This is just more continuous. It starts heavy and it ends heavy."

Department stores have increased their security staffs in preparation for the expected heavy Christmas crowd and its accompanying shoplifters, and the Schaumburg Police Dept. will join with the regular Woodfield security police patroling both inside and outside the mall.

SALES EXPECTATIONS in general are high. Merchants said business was not too bad last year during the recession, so they are expecting very good sales this year.

Mike Silverman, president of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, said, "All merchants who are trying to get business should succeed. If you're aggressive and have a good product or service, there are enough people in this area that there's no reason for business to be bad."

Phyllis Peszek of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Assn., said merchants there are expecting a good season. Helen DeWitt, public relations director for the Hawthorn Shopping Center in Libertyville, said she expects sales to be up over last year since more than 100 stores in the 3-year-old mall are now open.

Carol Pisasras, a saleswoman at Teddy's a women's fashions store, said the warm November weather cut into expected sales.

"Who needs winter clothing when it's 70 degrees outside," she said. "Now that there is some snow on the ground, people are more in the Christmas-buying spirit."

CHUCK SACCARO, owner of the Craft Shop at Randhurst, said sales last month were "incredible."

"Most of the people who shop here make their own Christmas gifts," he explained. "They buy what they need in November to give them time to make things."

Silger said many items in Sears are selling so fast that it is difficult to fill orders.

"There is a lot more investment in family entertainment gifts," Silger said "Our hottest item is "Pong," a $99 ping pong game which attaches to a TV set. We can't get enough of them. A type of pinball machine called Pachinko is selling fast at $50. People seem to realize they should be spending more time with their families. Instead of watching TV all night, they're attaching a Pong machine to the set and playing Pong."

Silger said other fast-selling items are mood rings, blow dryers, electronic watches for men and women, curling irons, leisure suits and anything made out of prewashed denim.

"PEOPLE ARE BUYING higher-quality items with longer lasting features— top of the line appliances, better quality clothing," he said. "Inflation is high, the dollar is hard to earn, and people are tired of getting little use out of something they paid good money for."

On what is traditionally described by merchants as the busiest day of the year, crowds in this area were a mixture of dedicated shoppers, impatient husbands, kids eyeing Santa and some looking for something to do.

"I'm waiting, my son's sleeping in this stroller, and my wife's shopping," said a Morton Grove man perched on a ledge in front of J.C. Penney's. "We're definitely buying today. We want to get as much shopping done as possible."

weapon, a 22-cal. pistol, was confiscated.

Aldape and the girl had been dating and broke up a few weeks ago, Braun said.

Police say Aldape broke into the apartment by smashing the glass in a kitchen door. The elder Keeley said the family returned from a Thanksgiving get-together about 2:30 a.m.

The parents notified Mount Prospect police about 8:30 a.m. after they woke up and discovered the break-in and their daughter missing, Braun said.

Aldape was arraigned Friday afternoon before Associate Judge Albert H. LaPlante in the Niles branch of circuit Court. The suspect was ordered taken to County jail without bound pending a Dec. 2 court date in Niles.

Keeley also said his daughter had begun working part time at Sambo's Restaurant, Mount Prospect, about a week ago.

another referendum. Bruce Anderson, association president, asked the board Tuesday to help him word the petition in a manner acceptable to the board.

ANDERSON ALSO asked if the board would agree to have the petition circulated by boys in the association rather than adults. Officials, however, said they felt having boys circulate the petitions would create an undesirable emotional effect on residents.

Anderson also sought a board commitment to issue a strong stand in support of the arena purchase, but officials said they can only provide information for a referendum and cannot take a stand for or against it.

Park officials agreed to meet with the association today to draft a petition.

Park officials expressed reservations about holding a second referendum in view of the margin of defeat of the last vote.

"BECAUSE THE arena is in operation now, there seems to be less reason to vote yes now than there was in June," Comr. Paul Jensen said. "It's to the public's advantage to have it run privately at a loss rather than publicly at a loss."

Comr. Walter Degner said he still questions if the ice rink can be profitable. "I think it may be too much of a single-purpose facility," he said.

Degner added he would prefer that the job of "selling the referendum" be done before a date is set rather than after.

Park Director Fred Hall said the feasibility study prepared for the first referendum would have to be updated to provide accurate information if a second referendum is scheduled. He said equipment at the arena must be reassessed as part of an updated feasibility study.

Hall said $6,000 was spent by the park district in preparation for the last referendum.

THE FIRST referendum sought voter approval to issue general-obligation bonds totaling $695,000 to purchase the rink.

The hockey association includes 445 boys who practice and play games at the arena. The association rents the rink at a rate of $70 per hour. The park district pays the association $2,000 annually to help support the hockey program.

Park officials said they have not closed the door on holding another referendum but want to determine the extent of public reaction to the proposal before proceeding.

IN A SURPRISE action scheduled only hours in advance, Ford appeared before White House reporters on the eve of his departure for China and announced he had concluded a two-week search for "the person I believe to be best qualified to serve as an associate justice of the Supreme Court."

It was Stevens, a member of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago since 1970 and a brilliant lawyer who had the enthusiastic support of both the American Bar Assn. and Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi.

Ford's announcement ended speculation he might nominate the first woman Supreme Court Justice as his wife and many feminists urged him to do — or choose some well known, but possibly controversial, candidate such as Solicitor Gen Robert Bork.

"Judge Stevens is held in the highest esteem by his colleagues in the legal profession and the judiciary and has had an outstanding career in the practice and teaching of law as well as on the federal bench," Ford said in his nationally broadcast announcement.

"I am confident that he will bring both professional and personal qualities of the highest order to the Supreme Court."

IN CHICAGO, Stevens told reporters he would "do everything in my power to render the best possible judicial service of which I am capable. . .

"If the Senate finds my qualifications acceptable I will begin the new assignment as expeditiously as possible and will do my utmost to discharge the responsibilities of the new office in a manner consistent with the finest traditions of a great institution."

Douglas, the man he would succeed, declined comment on the nomination.

Ford, who had submitted a list of at least 15 potential nominees to the ABA for its recommendations, said he had "conducted a thorough search and considered an extensive list of distinguished men and women to fill" the vacancy left by Douglas — a vacancy that reduced the liberal wing of Chief Justice Warren Burger's court to two members: Justices William J. Brennan Jr and Thurgood Marshall.

JUAN ALDAPE is led into Niles court Friday after his arrest in the shooting death of an ex-girlfriend Pamela Keeley, 17, 1606 Algonquin Rd., Mount Prospect. Aldape, 19, of Mount Prospect is being held on charges of murder, aggravated kidnapping and burglary.

Mt. Prospect girl murdered

by JOHN MAES

A Mount Prospect man has been charged with the kidnaping and murder of his 17 year old ex-girlfriend while her parents slept.

The body of Pamela Keeley, 1606 Algonquin Rd., clad only in underpants and a white T-shirt, was dumped along a roadside at Belmont Avenue and Noyes Street near Arlington Heights early Friday. She was shot five times in the head and chest.

Her father Jack Keeley said, "My wife and I were sound asleep through the whole thing." They were notified of the killing by police

IN CUSTODY IS Juan Aldape, 19, of 549 Dempster St., an employe at Universal Oil Products Co., Des Plaines. He has been charged with murder, aggravated kidnaping and burglary, said Lt. Frank Braun of the Sheriff's Police

The girl was a senior at Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, where the two had met, and had planned to become a stewardess with United Airlines following graduation, her father said. "She said it was something she'd like to do," he said.

Braun said Aldape allegedly shot the girl outside a gas station about a block away from where the body was found. Police were uncertain of the time of the shooting.

The girl was taken to Northwest Community Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

Pam Keeley

Police from Arlington Heights arrived on the scene about 6:45 a.m. after receiving two calls, one from a motorist who saw the body and reported it as an injury accident.

BRAUN SAID AFTER the shooting, Aldape reported the incident to Northwest Central Dispatch Center, a police radio communications system covering Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village and Buffalo Grove departments.

Braun said Aldape was later arrested at his apartment without struggle and the alleged murder weapon, a 22-cal. pistol, was confiscated

Aldape and the girl had been dating and broke up a few weeks ago, Braun said.

Police say Aldape broke into the apartment by smashing the glass in a kitchen door. The elder Keeley said the family returned from a Thanksgiving get-together about 2:30 a.m.

The parents notified Mount Prospect police about 8:30 a.m. after they woke up and discovered the break-in and their daughter missing, Braun said

Aldape was arraigned Friday afternoon before Associate Judge Albert H. LaPlante in the Niles branch of circuit Court. The suspect was ordered taken to County jail without bound pending a Dec. 2 court date in Niles.

Keeley also said his daughter had begun working part time at Sambo's Restaurant, Mount Prospect, about a week ago

Christians, Jews begin holiday seasons

Saturday

by KAREN BLECHA

Repent and rejoice. These are the two words that symbolize Advent, the church season that begins Sunday.

At Roman Catholic and Protestant churches throughout the area, families will light the first candle on the Advent wreath to welcome the season that prepares for Christmas and the coming of Christ.

Advent is a season that has changed at many churches over the years. Years ago it was a season of penance; today it is also a season for rejoicing.

"In past history the color purple used during Advent was a sign of penance," said the Rev. James Flesi, of St. Hubert's Catholic Church in Hoffman Estates.

"TODAY IT is more of a joyful celebration — a waiting for the coming of Christ," he said.

The season of Advent is second only to Easter in importance in most churches. The term "advent" is of secular origin, referring to the official reception of royalty.

In the Roman Catholic Church, Advent is a time of preparation for Christmas and a season of looking forward to Christ's second coming at the end of time The first part of the season focuses on the glorious return of the Lord while the second part accents the Lord's birth.

The symbols of the season are the Advent wreath, which symbolizes the unending God, and the Jesse tree The Advent wreath has four candles, each one representing one of the four Sundays before Christmas. Each Sunday one of the candles is lit.

At the Church of the Incarnation United Methodist, Arlington Heights, the candles have added significance, said the Rev. Larry Hilkemann. The candles symbolize the Wise Men, Shepherds, Mary and Joseph who obeyed the Lord and the birth of Christ

"WE ALSO have a Jesse tree which is a reminder of the Old Testament and that God said Jesus would be coming," Hilkemann said. At Church of the In-

Hanukkah: Festival of Lights

by JILL BETTNER

The Hanukkah candles the Milton Jacobs family will light this weekend in their Hoffman Estates home symbolize a personal commitment to preserving the special meaning of the beautiful eight-day Festival of Lights

They believe without this kind of dedication, the significance of Hanukkah could be lost and the customs subtly "Christianized" in the Northwest suburbs.

Today, Jews are outnumbered nearly four-to-one in the Northwest suburbs, creating some problems for families like the Jacobs who want their two young daughters, Bonni, 7, and Cheryl, 5, to understand and appreciate the uniqueness of their own religion and heritage.

HANUKKAH IS PROBABLY the toughest time to protect Jewish individuality, she said, especially for children. For a while, Bonni and Cheryl attended public schools. Concerned that the girls might feel left out of things with the general preoccupation with Christmas, Mrs. Jacobs would request time to speak to their classes about Hanukkah.

Her husband agreed, saying, "Christmas puts a lot of pressure on Jewish children. Hanukkah is important, but it isn't a holiday that should be equated to Christmas in importance. But because the two happen about the same time, it is."

Bonni and Cheryl now attend Woodfield Jewish Day School, Hoffman Estates, where children begin learning Hebrew and Jewish history in kindergarten.

Bonni knows all about Hanukkah, which, she explained, "reminds us of all the things that happened in the story of the Maccabees."

THE MACCABEES were a group of guerrillas who literally saved the Jewish religion from being wiped out by the Syrians in 165 B.C. Syrian King Antiochus decreed that year that the only temple of worship for Jews in Palestine was to be destroyed. The temple was taken over, idols placed inside and a pig sacrificed on the altar, desecrating the House of God.

Refusing to accept religious genocide, the Mac-

THEY CAME BY THE thousands to shop the post-Thanksgiving bargains Friday at shopping centers throughout the area. Weary shoppers take a break at Woodfield Shopping Center, a scene that was repeated in most stores, as record-breaking crowds defied inflation to buy, buy buy.

Merchants delighted: 'recession over'

Christmas shoppers pack Northwest stores

A Herald staff report

Record crowds of shoppers streamed into Northwest suburban stores Friday to begin their holiday shopping, kicking off what is expected to be the highest-volume sales season ever.

At Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg, where crows of almost 125,000 packed the mall the day after Thanksgiving last year, officials estimated 20 per cent more shoppers this year.

Merchants throughout the area believe the recession has ended, shoppers are more confident about money and Christmas sales will break all previous records.

AT WOODFIELD, lockers for coats and packages were full by 10 a.m., parking spaces were at a premium by 11, and by noon, lines streamed outside restaurants and rest rooms.

The red and purple steps in the center of the mall were covered with shoppers seeking a rest from heavy shopping bags and shoulder-to-shoulder traffic.

Still, not many shoppers seemed to mind the crowds.

"I like to go shopping when it's like this," one teenager was overheard saying to her friend. "Salespeople don't bug you when it's this crowded."

David Silger, merchandising manager at Sears at Woodfield, said the day after Thanksgiving is so busy because there are several things happening simultaneously that do not usually occur at the same time.

BESIDES THE traditional desire to start Christmas shopping after Thanksgiving, Silger said, many firms are closed, enabling more people to go shopping; with husbands home, more wives could leave their children home and shop in peace; days when schools are closed are busy because high school students come to the malls and mothers bring young children in for clothes; and banks paid out Christmas Club money last week

"In departments where people traditionally do their Christmas shopping, like jewelry and cosmetics, we may have as many as 50 per cent additional salespeople," Silger said.

"We're geared for this type of traffic all the time because we pack this store every Saturday and Sunday," he said. "This is just more continuous. It starts heavy and it ends heavy."

Department stores have increased their security staffs in preparation for the expected heavy Christmas crowd and its accompanying shoplifters, and the Schaumburg Police Dept. will join with the regular Woodfield security police patroling both inside and outside the mall.

SALES EXPECTATIONS in general are high. Merchants said business was not too bad last year during the recession, so they are expecting very good sales this year.

Mike Silverman, president of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, said, "All merchants who are trying to get business should succeed. If you're aggressive and have a good product or service, there are enough people in this area that there's no reason for business to be bad."

Phyllis Peszek of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Assn., said merchants there are expecting a good season. Helen DeWitt, public relations director for the Hawthorn Shopping Center in Libertyville, said she expects sales to be up over last year since more than 100 stores in the 3-year-old mall are now open.

Carol Pisasras, a saleswoman at Teddy's a women's fashions store, said the warm November weather cut into expected sales.

"Who needs winter clothing when it's 70 degrees outside," she said "Now that there is some snow on the ground, people are more in the Christmas-buying spirit."

CHUCK SACCARO, owner of the Craft Shop at Randhurst, said sales last month were "incredible."

"Most of the people who shop here make their own Christmas gifts," he explained. "They buy what they need in November to give them time to make things."

Silger said many items in Sears are selling so fast that it is difficult to fill orders

"There is a lot more investment in family entertainment gifts," Silger said "Our hottest item is "Pong," a $99 ping pong game which attaches to a TV set We can't get enough of them. A type of pinball machine, called Pachinko is selling fast at $50 People seem to realize they should be spending more time with their families. Instead of watching TV all night, they're attaching a Pong machine to the set and playing Pong."

Silger said other fast-selling items are mood rings, blow dryers, electronic watches for men and women, curling irons, leisure suits and anything made out of prewashed denim.

"PEOPLE ARE BUYING higher-quality items with longer lasting features— top of the line appliances, better quality clothing," he said "Inflation is high, the dollar is hard to earn, and people are tired of getting little use out of something they paid good money for "

On what is traditionally described by merchants as the busiest day of the year, crowds in this area were a mixture of dedicated shoppers, impatient husbands, kids eyeing Santa and some looking for something to do.

"I'm waiting, my son's sleeping in this stroller, and my wife's shopping," said a Morton Grove man perched on a ledge in front of J.C. Penney's. "We're definitely buying today. We want to get as much shopping done as possible "

Township takes over half of 'Prospectus' hotline

Half of Mount Prospect's Prospectus counseling program has been turned over to Elk Grove Township, with negotiations under way for township takeover of the rest of the program.

The village's hotline program was taken over during the past week by the Regional Youth Services Bureau, which also operates hotlines for Elk Grove, Schaumburg and Palatine townships.

The remainder of the Prospectus counseling services is to be transferred to the township at a later date, but no official contract has yet been signed. Larry Eils, village director of health services, said talks on the takeover are continuing.

THE FIRST PART of the takeover has gone smoothly, Eils said, noting the youth service bureau has moved into the old village hall annex, 108-110 E. Northwest Hwy.

"It's gone pretty smoothly. We haven't noticed any problem," Eils said.

Although the hotline telephone number has been changed, Eils said there has been little problem there since the telephone company is referring people to the new Talkline number.

The changeover was an outgrowth of discussions between township officials and Mayor Robert D. Teichert, who suggested that the townships were better suited for social service programs.

"I THINK THE idea was to continue what we are providing but give them the opportunity to expand and improve things," Teichert said.

Township Supervisor Richard M. Hall said both the hotline and counseling programs will be available to Mount Prospect residents living in Wheeling Township as well. He said Wheeling Township will contract for their part of the programs.

Once the contract is completed and signed, the township will begin remodeling three rooms in the village hall annex, to be paid for by the township.

The village is continuing to operate its senior citizens program, although the board's public health and safety committee is studying the village's commitment to the elderly. Further discussion is scheduled for the committee's December meeting.
